

RED REDMAYNES

EDEN PHILPOTTS ILLUSTRATED BY R.W. SATTERFIELD

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY. Mark Brendon, famous criminal investigator, while taking holiday on Dartmoor is asked by Jenny Pender...

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY. CHAPTER III. THE MYSTERY. Brendon followed Halfyard into the apartment destined to be the kitchen...

Nothing that he regarded as of value resulted from inspection of the room. Brendon presented a statement that he would return to the house...

The correctness of Brendon's deduction was made manifest within an hour and the operations of Robert Redmayne defied up to a point. A man was waiting at the police station...

There had been several telephone calls for Inspector Halfyard during the afternoon and now three separate statements from different districts awaited him...

Standing six feet five inches in his bare feet, Frank Clarke, aged 18, of the Irish Guards, Aldershot, is claimed to be by many inches the tallest drummer in the British Army...

nothing further. I go to Paignton this evening.

"Thank you—you are very kind," Brendon returned to the police station and was astonished to find that Robert Redmayne continued at large...

"They do not teach us any religion. Nobody can teach it, though it may be communicated or absorbed."

"From those who already have it," the priest replied. "From the guru, the religious men, who would refuse to teach, counting their eyes always shut, though other men for truth may come and live and study with them."

"The guru is a sacred friend and helper because he already has that light we seek. All the guru does outwardly is to give certain teachings, exercises in concentrating the mind and a line or two of prayer..."
