

For the Boys and Girls

IN TREE-TOP LAND

BY MARTIN BRETHERTON.

Dorothy was in the seventh grade, and she was a very smart little girl. She was walking through the woods, and she was looking for a place to build a tree house. She had been thinking about it for a long time, and she was sure she could do it. She was walking along a road, and she was looking for a place to build a tree house. She had been thinking about it for a long time, and she was sure she could do it. She was walking along a road, and she was looking for a place to build a tree house. She had been thinking about it for a long time, and she was sure she could do it.

TREE-TOP BAKERS.

The Spanish Chestnuts were the bakers. There were all sorts of breads and cakes in the kitchen. Dorothy was looking at them, and she was thinking about how to make them. She was looking at them, and she was thinking about how to make them. She was looking at them, and she was thinking about how to make them. She was looking at them, and she was thinking about how to make them.

Yellow Warblers.

The first faint dawn was flushing up the sky. When, greenland still bewilderingly wide eyes, looked to the oak that, winter-long beyond his casement had been void of song.

And lo! with golden buds the twigs were set. Live buds that warbled like a rivulet beneath a veil of willows. Then I knew those tiny voices, clear as drops of dew. Those flying daffodils that fleck the blue.

Where Contentment Lies.

There are few things in life over which we have absolute control. Most things are influenced by someone or something outside ourselves. It is very wise who is always able to distinguish between what is within his power and what is beyond it.

Lettuce and Talk.

The lettuce is to me a most interesting study. Lettuce is like conversation; it is fresh and crisp, and it is full of life.

Wine High Honor
Dr. Ales Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, who has been awarded the highest British honor in anthropology, the Huxley medal, in writing his great work, 'Old Americans,' he journeyed over half the globe. Prof. Ripley, of Harvard, is the only other American to win the award in 20 years.

The Master-Perfumer.

Into a crowded elevator for a woman entered from the twentieth floor and brought with her a perfume, the memory of which has lingered with one of the other passengers for years. There was just one odor like it in the world.

The Sandman.

I wanted for the Sandman. Down on the star. I caught him there. I only want of little dreams.

Love's Labor Lost.

Slowly and carefully the young man strove to get down the little lane at the back of his house pushing the big wheelbarrow before him.

DIET AND HEALTH

In building a house we have a variety of materials, any of which may be the best to use under certain conditions. For the roof, we may use shingles, tiles, slates or tin. For the walls, we may use wood or brick. For the floor, we may use wood or cement. For the frame, we may use wood or steel.

Spring in an English Village.

Bliss has fallen during the night. The morning is gray with thin clouds and sunlight struggling to pierce them.

Wonders of Light.

What is color? It is a sensation which is produced in the eye by the action of light on the retina.

"PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE"

Let us see how the plan works and what we can do to make it work. There is no better policy in the world than this if we are to understand our own nature.

Singing is Good Exercise.

Music, in the form of singing, is one of the best of physical exercises. It is good for the body, the mind, and the soul.

Stories in Stones.

There is history in every stone. The stones tell us of the lives of the people who lived in the past.

Job's Patience.

Job was a man of great faith and patience. He was tested by many trials, but he never gave up.

Hurt His Feelings.

A farmer had a horse that was very stubborn. He was hurt by the horse's behavior.

These Fish Aren't Very Thirsty.

In all still places, there are many fish. They are not very thirsty, but they are very smart.

Still Places and High.

In all still places, there are many fish. They are not very thirsty, but they are very smart.

Britain Beats the World.

A thoroughbred race horse has won the world's longest race. Britain has won the world's longest race.

Departure.

As one smothered in a cabin, waiting doom. Like the sail slow creeping of northern dawn.

His Good Turn.

The boy Scout proudly announced at the breakfast table that he had had a good turn.

No Raise for Him.

His expenses at home are increasing, and I am growing old in years. I am growing old in years.
