By David Dietz. This, however, would not be the case if the fossils were found in the same layer. The fossils found in the same layer are of the same type.

At such a time, the low waters would be lifted high above their original level. The ancient life is known to us from the fossils found in these layers.

For these are the remains of the animals and plants which inhabited the earth at the time when these layers of rock were formed.

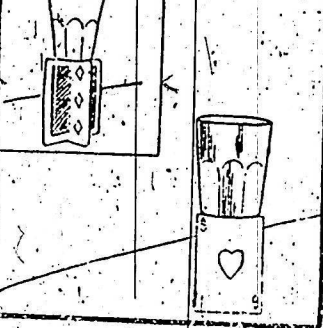

The fossils include remains of shells and similar animals which live on the ocean bottom. They also include the remains of plants which grew on land.

There are also fossils of plants which grew on land. These fossils are found in the same layer as the fossils of animals.
