To the Electors of S. E. Grey

Mr. Edwards, at the Nomination stated that Canadians consumed 85% of all farm products; that Sir Robert Borden introduced penny postage, and he informed that I did not favour having manufacturing plants in our towns. I had no time to touch on these in my 15 minutes for reply. Canadians consume about 14% of what we produce on farms in good years and about 60% in bad years. The average would be less than 50%. Sir Wm. Mulock introduced penny postage when Postmaster General in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet. I favor an intensive and industrial development as is healthy or other progress in Canada; I am always glad when factories are running full time. Then I know that the workers are busy and happy and that Canadian citizens elsewhere are prosperous enough to know the products of their labor. I know that the cheaper goods are the more they will be sold and the busier the workers will be. I know that high tariff makes dear goods. Yours sincerely, Agnes C. Macphail.

To the Electors of S. E. Grey

Markdale, Sept. 5th, 1926. Editor Markdale Standard: Dear Sir—It is not often of late years that I have been tempted to write an open letter through the columns of a newspaper, but your last week's issue contains a political appeal so amusing and, at the same time, so misleading, that I cannot let it pass without comment. My reference is to an article or advertisement under the caption of "Farmers in the Field," and is published by the authority of the President and Secretary of the S. E. Grey P. Political Association. The quality of the English matters little, but the voice is that of Jacob. The expressions "homage to the common people" and "special privilege" in the first paragraph, sound amazingly like the pet phrases of the late member for South East Grey. It had in mind "the people who work with their hands," the cycle would have been complete. A "motoring tourist" is supposed to be courting as to the candidates in the political field, and is informed that there are two farmers, one who has served well and represents the "common people" and the other representing "special privilege." Any sound giving such information has certainly succeeded fairly well in "stiffening the voice of conscience." An unbiased informant would have said that the Conservative Candidate is a farmer, the U.F.O. Candidate a school teacher, and that no Liberal Candidate has yet been selected. If the farming activities of the U.F.O. Candidate have included anything far from an occasional helping at home in the holidays, and the buying of chickens which make some activities have been kept quite, successfully hidden. If a representative farmer is one who for thirty years has continuously resided on a farm and has during all of those years been actively engaged in farming, who has reared and educated a large family of sons and daughters, who has improved his land and brought it to a high state of tillage, who has erected a house and barns that are a credit to the community and made of his home and its surroundings a pleasing sight to the eyes of the "motoring tourist," then R. T. Edwards, Conservative Candidate in South East Grey, is that man. It is rather amusing to note how the interests of the "common people" are being represented by Miss Agnes Macphail, "who served them so well in the last two parliaments." If by "common people" is meant people who do not read, cannot think and fail to understand, then perhaps the statement is well within the truth. To people who have been honestly and intelligently trying to follow her, however, the mental acrobatics of our late member in the last session of parliament must have been productive of a vast amount of dizziness and brain fog, to say the least. In her election campaign literature last year she was an Independent. In her nomination speech at Durham she declared that if elected she would represent the farmers of South East Grey and no one else. In caucus at
