Over 30 years a standard wherever good tea is liked.

Recent Remarks of Londoners.

Nothing has been more remarkable than the manner in which the trade of the country and its employment have stood up to the cruel straits inflicted upon them.—Whinton Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Problems inscrutable when approached with suspicion are less intractable when suspicion and mistrust are dispelled.—Lord Irwin.

There are two phrases I hate—"having a good time" and "getting my own back."—Lord Phillimore.

The final foundations of marriage are the primary virtues.—John A. R. Cairns, Metropolitan Police Magistrate.

The bumper crop of American cotton ought to have a good effect upon the fortunes of our customers. It is certain that someone, somewhere, will spin it. We hope it may be spun in Lancashire.—Martin C. Harman, Chairman John Hetherington & Sons, Ltd., Textile Machine Makers.

Over-production should not be mentioned until say, 90 per cent. of the world's inhabitants are well clad and well fed.—Martin C. Harman.

The Likeness.
The distinguished man and his wife were inspecting the latest art exhibit with critical eyes.

"That's the ugliest portrait I've ever seen!" he cried angrily, striving vainly for a better view of the abomination.

"Come on, you fool," replied his wife. "You are looking at yourself in the mirror."

MEET MAN'S FIRST COUSINS

They Are the Gibbon, Orang, Chimpanzee and Gorilla.

The sketch shows the gorilla, the most formidable of the man-like or anthropoid apes. These are man's first cousins, so the evolutionists declare.

Secrets of Science.

By David Dietz.

The manlike or anthropoid apes represent the highest type of evolution among the apes.

They come the nearest to man in similarity of structure.

They do not have tails.

There are four types of anthropoid apes found to-day—the gibbon, the orang, the chimpanzee and the gorilla.

The gibbon is the smallest of the manlike apes, rarely exceeding a height of three feet.

The arms are longer than his legs, touching the ground when he stands erect.

The gibbon swings from branch to branch, holding by his hands after the fashion of acrobats. He spends the day in the tree-tops, descending to the ground only at night.

He runs along the ground with difficulty and is easily brought to bay.

He climbs from branch to branch, making leaps of 12 to 15 feet.
