one of the best of tredit and business builders. In this slogan the National Association of Credit Men has given recognition to another fundamental principle of business-letter writing. Many firms require that all letters be acknowledged on the day they are received, whether or not final onswert can be made, at that time, This requirement is based on an un derstanding of a fact, of human native, namely, that every person-likesto receive immediate attention. De Lay is, of course, preferable to hastily constructed letters which fail to ac complish their purpose and endanger the future welfare of the business. On the other hand, even a good letter will fall short if the person addressed has become curaged through long waiting for reply. It is well for the corresponded to remember that what scens a mere matter of routine to him often seems much more import-
