Changing Times Changing Methods

New Orientation of the British View of the "Danger, Spot'

According to the Herald Tribune's dispatches from London the British government is actively debating the oposal to transfer the main "striking force" of the British Army from England to ndia. There are reports of the Russians massing their divicions across the northwest frontier and flinging a strategic railway into Afghanistan. The feeling which has been strong in Europe ever since the Anglo-Russian break that Russia constitutes the most unstable element in present world politics appears to be growing, and the alert are picking up new hints of war.
