"SALADA" GREEN TEA

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Paul Harley, criminal investigator, is engaged by Sir Charles Abingdon to solve the mystery of a person unknown to him. While Harley is dining at the Abingdon home, Sir Charles falls to the floor in a dying condition. Harley insists that Abingdon is poisoned. The last words uttered by Sir Charles are "Nicol Brinn" and "Fire-Tongue." Paul asks Nicol Brinn to tell him the meaning of "Fire-Tongue." Brinn refuses to enlighten Harley.

Vaguely he detected the speaker withdrawing. Thereupon, leaving a loud sigh, he removed his coat, looked about him as if in quest of some place to hang it, and finally fixing his gaze upon the studded grating, stood upon the davenport and hung his coat over the spy-hack. The table was slowly sinking through the gap in the floor beneath. Treading softly, he moved forward and seated himself cross-legged upon it. It continued to descend, and he found himself in absolute darkness.

Nicol Brinn ran on to the veranda and paused for a moment to take breath. The window remained open, as Phil Abingdon had left it. He stepped into the room with his elegant Persian appointments. It was empty. But as he crossed the threshold, he arrested, by the sound of a voice.

"A statement will be placed before you," said the voice. "And when you have signed it, in a few minutes you will be free."

Nicol Brinn silently dropped flat at the back of a divan, as Rama Dass, coming out of the room which communicated with the golden screen, made his way toward the distant door. Having one eye raised above the top of the cushions, Nicol Brinn watched him, recognizing the man who had accompanied the swooning lady. She had been deposited, then, at no great distance from the house.

Creeping forward to the doorway by which Rama Dass had gone out, Nicol Brinn emerged upon a landing from which stairs both ascended and descended. Faint sounds of footsteps below guided him, and although from all outward seeming he appeared to saunter casually down, his left hand was clutching the butt of a Colt automatic.

He presently found himself in a maze of basement kitchens of the establishment, no doubt. The sound of footsteps no longer guided him. He walked along, and in a smaller deserted pantry discovered the base of a lift shaft in which some sort of small elevator worked. He was staring at this reflectively, when, for the second time in his adventurous career a silken cord was slipped tightly about his throat.

He was tripped and thrown. He fought furiously, but the fatal knee pressure came upon his spine so shrewdly as to deprive him of the strength to raise his hands.

Lord Selkirk And Canadian Place-Names

His Activities in Various Parts of Dominion Commemorated in Nomenclature

Perhaps no figure in Canadian history is more widely commemorated in the place-nomenclature of the Dominion than Thomas Douglas, 5th Baron Daer and Shortleugh and Earl of Selkirk in the peerage of Scotland. The name of the Scottish peer, who controlled the Hudson's Bay Company and colonized in three provinces, is found in the four quarters of the Dominion. In Prince Edward Island, in the east, Selkirk settlement and Selkirk point mark where he personally established 800 Highland settlers in 1803. In the west, Selkirk water has been shown on charts since 1846 as the name of a portion of Victoria harbor, Vancouver Island. In the north, Arctic explorers have bestowed including Selkirk, a bay in Melville peninsula; and Selkirk, a cape on Boothia peninsula. In the south, in Kent county, Ontario, Baldoon, named after one of the Selkirk estates in Wigtownshire, Scotland, is a memorial of the small colony, established there in 1803, with which the Earl was associated. In Manitoba, the town of Selkirk and Selkirk Island, Lake Winnipeg, and Point Douglas, a district of the city of Winnipeg recall the settlement in the Red River valley by Lord Selkirk in 1812 of the first body of colonists in the Northwest.

The Unclean Male

London Sunday Times (Cons.). We have grown accustomed to the unromantic thought that the Elizabethans, swaggering through the streets in clean, clean, and in a smaller deserted pantry discovered the base of a lift shaft in which some sort of small elevator worked. He was staring at this reflectively, when, for the second time in his adventurous career a silken cord was slipped tightly about his throat.

What About the Reel?

Manchester Guardian (Lib.). It would seem that right from the very earliest days there has been room for two schools of opinion about dancing as an exercise for military men. On the one hand there is the tradition of the "war dance," which is certainly regarded among those tribes which indulge in it as an essential and unmitigated pastime; on the other hand there is the attitude of Michael, Saul's daughter, who "looked through a window and saw King David leaping and dancing before the Lord; and she despised him in her heart."

The Prayer Book In Parliament

Since the time of Edward VI. Parliament has never relinquished its control, until 1919, when by the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919, it gave the initiative in church affairs to the Church of England. By this enactment a Church Assembly was created, consisting of three houses—the House of Bishops, the House of Clergy and the House of Laity. They are authorized to deliberate on all matters concerning the Church of England and to make provision in respect thereof.

The act creates an ecclesiastical committee of fifteen peers and fifteen members of the House of Commons, and any measure submitted by the Legislative Committee of the Church Assembly is referred to this committee, whose duty it is to make a report to Parliament. When reported, a resolution is offered in each house, directing that the measure be presented to the King for his assent, on effect of an order in Council. The measure cannot be modified by Parliament—it must be either accepted or rejected.

Discipline of the Roman Church. Some Anglo-Catholic extremists favor disestablishment, as in the past nonconformists did, but this is not a real issue at present. The other alternatives are to allow the present chaos to continue, or, as the Archbishop of Canterbury has announced after a conference with the bishops, to reconsider the revision and send it once more to Parliament.

Attractive New Knitted Frocks

Knitted sweater-frocks in two and three piece styles are being shown by designers for early Spring wear under the new topcoats. These dresses are quite different from what is ordinarily expected of this type of frock and the newest fashion trends from Paris are incorporated in the styling. For instance, the new kerchief collar is used to add variety. It is made with a contrasting color in yoke form in the back, and the extra ends are brought around to the in a low knot in front. Another type of neck that promises to be very smart is made with five points, the back being square and extending over the shoulders while the front, instead of the crossing in a straight line, drops into a deep "V" while its again shown as well as the flat "crew," canoe and geometric necklines.

These dresses are made of a soft cashmere wool or one of the new rayon mixtures that have a firm hand thread that prevents the garment from stretching and at the same time assures maximum warmth. This new texture is used in different weaves to achieve the effect of tucks, pleats, fancy ribbing and so forth. Different designs are worked out in the weaving and at a distance look exactly like fine hand-blocked prints.

Costly slips made for wear with the new Spring chiffon and crepe dresses show a wealth of detail in the finishing. The horns are no longer merely machine stitched, but are now made with hand-stitched scallops, pleated edges and cut-out tabs. The trend of even hemlines, to wear with some of the very slinky fabrics, there are numerous models with ruffles put in circular lines. The tops are made to fit snugly and serve as foundation for the dress. At the waist there is a belted effect, fitting snugly to prevent any suggestion of bulk or fullness that might destroy the smooth lines needed about the hips. Shoulder straps are made most colorfully of the same material as the dress.

But, as Lord Denbigh said in the recent debate in the House of Lords, speaking as a Roman Catholic who declined to vote on the subject: "I cannot imagine a more incompetent body to which to refer such a question than the present modern Parliament, composed as it is of professed agnostics and men of various religions, many of whom never go to a place of worship on one year's end to another, except, perhaps, to see their friends married or buried or to be married or buried themselves."

How Tied Neckline. The smart junior dress shown here will particularly please mother, because it is so easily made. Design No. 1701 is a copy of an older frock with a square neckline finished with a row of buttons that are fastened at each side. There is a vertical line at each side seam and the long sleeves are gathered to narrow wrist-bands. It would be very attractive if fashioned of French blue wool jersey with a suede belt and the neckline lined in black. Novelty woolen, knit crepe and velvet are interesting fabrics for its development also. No. 1701 is in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1 1/2 yards 36-inch, or 1 1/2 yards 44-inch material, and 3/4 yards binding. Pattern 20c the pattern.

How to Order Patterns. Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of size patterns you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred), wrap it carefully for each number and address your order to Pattern Dept., Wilson Publishing Co., 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Patterns sent by return mail.
