

At one time people could get only bulk tea—tea exposed to air—flat flavour. Then came "SALADA"—sealed in metal—full-flavoured—fresh—delicious—dust-free—now people use "SALADA". Four grades—75¢ to $1.05 per lb.

"SALADA" TEA

CHAPTER XXX.—(Cont'd.)

"This was not primarily to seal tea of the Brahmans, nor even to visit Kinnarayana, but to endeavor to obtain a glimpse of the Temple of Vadi."

"We had camped for the night in the shadow of one of the giant trees. The bears were seated around their fire at some little distance from us; and Vadi and I were consulting respecting our route in the morning, when I decided to take him into my confidence. Accordingly—

"Vadi, I said, 'I know for a fact that we are now in ten miles of the secret Temple of Vadi.'

"The sabbath is over,' he replied. 'So is Vadi,' said I. 'Therefore let him sleep happy; a thousand legions of flesh-and-bone would make fun. It is his turn for a night,' the Temptor.

"A man may die for nothing," he returned, softly. "Why should the sabbath pay a thousand pounds?"

"It is forbidden for any to see the Temple even from a distance."

"But if no one knows that I have seen it?"

"Fire-Tongue knows everything, he replied, and as he pronounced the name, he performed a curious salutation, touching his forehead with the tip of his tongue, and then laying his head upon his brows, upon his lips, and upon his bosom, at the same time bowing deeply."

"This conversation took place as I have already mentioned, in the shadow of one of those strange stone boulders which abounded here and there at this point. I received a thrill, which might have deterred many men, since it was inexplicable and strangely awe-inspiring.

"My attention was drawn to the phenomenon by a sudden cessation of batten amongst the bears seated around their fire. I became aware that all absolute stillness had fallen, and in the eyes of the Brahmin who sat facing me I saw a look of expectation, of wild fanaticism.

"I jerked my head around, looking back over my shoulder, and when I saw I shall never forget, nor to this day have I been able to explain the means by which the illusion was produced.

"Moving downward toward me through the jungle darkness slowly, evenly, but at a height above the ground, or what I judged to be about fifteen feet, was a sort of torch or flambeau, visible because it was faintly luminous and surrounding it was a darting tongue of blue flame!"

"At the moment that I set my eyes upon this apparently supernatural spectacle, the bears, crying somewhat in Hindostani which I did not understand, rose and fled in a body."

"I may say here that I never saw any of them again; although, considering that they took nothing with them, how they regained the nest-egg is a mystery which I have never solved."

"Moving downward toward me through the jungle darkness slowly, evenly, but at a height above the ground, or what I judged to be about fifteen feet, was a sort of torch or flambeau, visible because it was faintly luminous and surrounding it was a darting tongue of blue flame!"

"At the moment that I set my eyes upon this apparently supernatural spectacle, the bears, crying somewhat in Hindostani which I did not understand, rose and fled in a body."

"I may say here that I never saw any of them again; although, considering that they took nothing with them, how they regained the nest-egg is a mystery which I have never solved."

"Gentlemen, I know the East as few of my fellow-citizens know it. I know something of the powers which are latent in some Orientals and active in others." That my Brahmin guide was a "hypnotist" and an illusionist I have since thought.

"For even at the patterning foot-steps of the beavers there faint in the distance, the fiery torch disappeared in a little cave beside it, which afforded grateful shelter from the merciless rays of the sun. I unfastened my bundle and prepared to take a frugal lunch."

"I was an employed, gentleman, when I heard the sound of approaching footsteps on the path behind me—the path which I had recently traversed."

"Hastily concealing my bundle, I slipped into some dense undergrowth by the entrance to the cave, and crouched there, waiting and watching. I had waited very long before a yellow-robed mendicant passed by, carrying a bundle not unlike my own, whereby I concluded that he had come some distance."

"I gave him half an hour's start and then resumed my march. If he could travel beneath a noonday sun, so could I."

"In this fashion I presently came out upon a larger and higher plateau, carpeted with a uniform, stunted undergrowth, and extending, as flat as a table, to the very edge of a sheer precipice, which rose from it to a height of three or four hundred feet."

"Clutching the rope with my left hand, I groaned and lay still. The Brahmin slightly shifted his position which was what I wanted him to do. The brief respite had been sufficient. As he moved, I managed to draw my knees up very slightly, for he was a big heavy man, but sufficiently to enable me to throw him off and roll over."

"These gentlemen, I dealt with him as he had meant to deal with me; only I used my bare hands and made a job of it."

"The mendicant was fully half a mile away from me, but in that clear tropical air was plainly visible; and fearing that he might look around, I stepped back into the comparative shadow of the gorge and watched.

"Gentlemen, I saw a strange thing. Placing his bundle upon his head, he walked squarely into the face of the waterfall and disappeared."

CHAPTER XXXII.

STORY OF THE CITY OF FIRE (CONT'D.)

"Quitting air, must pass through water." The meaning of those words became apparent enough; I stood at the foot of the waterfall, looking up at the fissures from which it issued.

"Although the fact had been most artfully disguised, I could not doubt that this fissure was artificial.

"A great deal of mist arose from it. But I could see that, beyond a ducking, I had little to fear; and, stepping down into the bed of the little stream which frothed and bubbled pleasantly about my bare legs, I set my bundle on my head as the mendicant had done, and plunged through the waterfall, into a place of delicious coolness.

(To be continued.)

Golden-Haired Ape Sought in Jungles By Four Scientists

PARTY HEADED BY H. A. WHITE, OF FIELD MUSEUM, TO HUNT FOR OTHER RARE ANIMALS ON EXPEDITION TO ASIA

NEW ORLEANS.—The golden-faced monkey, the giant panther, the blue tiger, the giant selecions, the hantang and other animals, the names of which will doubtless be heard to sing in aria from Tosca" in one of the coaches.

Captain Harold A. White, of the Field Museum, of Chicago,

With Captain White are Morris and Sidney Legge, of New Orleans, graduates of "Yale" and Princeton, and recent Oxford students, and Ben Hinney of Richmond, Va., all athletes with a liking for science.

Of the rare animals sought the golden-faced monkey and the giant panther are the most desired. The former is a monkey covered with long, golden hair, beautiful in appearance and so rare that even ancient Chinese manuscripts number it among gifts worthy of presentation to emperors.

The golden-faced monkey is the shiniest one to his credit. It weighed 3,000 pounds in the New Zoological Gardens. After six months in the jungles he hunted from San Francisco, Japan, to its collection for the Field Museum.

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

The station master announced, "Four minutes late, the train pulled out."

Quebec Sports Big Attraction

Beginning end of December and running until the third week of March and featuring the Eastern International Dog-sled Derby, the Quebec City Winter sports is a magnet that brings the tourists from near and far. Illustration shows Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Moore, taking a sled run down the Dufferin Terrace just outside the Chateau Frontenac where they stayed over the New Year's holiday with a distinguished party from that State.

Japanese Girl Not So "Modern"

Mrs. Sugimoto, Columbia Instructor, Finds Her More Conservative Than Ever on Visit to Homeland.

Tokio.—So-called "modern" Japanese girls are not nearly so modern as their critics would have one believe according to Mrs. Etsu Sugimoto, author of "A Daughter of a Samurai" and for many years a professor in the extension department of Columbia University.

Mrs. Sugimoto is spending a year's leave of absence in Tokio with one of her daughters, her visit to her homeland being the first in many years. In a recent interview the author made the surprising statement that she finds the Japanese of to-day more conservative than the Japanese she knew some years ago. She hastened to explain the statement by going on to say that of course the Japanese of to-day has progressed greatly in adapting to Japanese civilization the many mechanical conveniences while the world has to offer.

DON'T WANT TO FORGET PAST

"But," she added, "there is an interesting feeling on the part of thoughtful Japanese that they must not throw away the old civilization. They must lose themselves in an enthusiasm for something new and forget all of the past. That is what I mean when I say the Japanese are more conservative than ever. They are conservative in that they are adapting themselves rationally to the mixing of Eastern and Western civilization."

Commenting on the modern movement among Japanese women and especially young girls, Mrs. Sugimoto expressed the view that girls go in extreme foreign style and that their hair also not nearly so radical in their beliefs and actions as many Japanese girls who dress in Japanese style.

The author went on to say that a great deal of the blame for the ultra-modern conduct of many Japanese girls may be laid at the door of parents. She pointed out that too many Japanese girls, after receiving a liberal education, are given an opportunity to express themselves through normal channels. This restriction, she believes, is largely responsible for the modern outbreaks of many girls, who are merely seeking an outlet for their pent-up feelings.

SPENT GIRLHOOD IN JAPAN

Mrs. Sugimoto spent her girlhood in Japan during that great transition period in Japanese history when the Nippon Empire was discarding its traditional policy of national isolation. She failed to the shores of America to become the bride of a Japanese, leaving behind her the manners and traditions which had been instilled in her from birth. Some years later, at the death of her husband, Mrs. Sugimoto returned to Japan for four years with her two daughters, one of whom is now married and living in Kobe.

How It's Done

Nattempts have long been made to show how the primitive drumming sound and the probable reason for it, said Harry F. Lewis, Chief Musical Officer for Ontario and Quebec. This question has now been resolved by means of close-up moving pictures which show that the bird makes the noise of moving its wings rapidly through the air to attract its mate.

A Sale of Medals Recalls Right Hand

The Adventurous Story of General Auction

Medals and documents were auctioned in London, of which one of the highlights was a sword belonging to Prince Edward, Duke of York, who had been a soldier when he was a boy. When he suddenly became King of England, he sold the sword.

Before the sale began, the Duke's son, the Prince of Wales, was suddenly taken ill and died. The Duke was grief-stricken at the loss of his son.

On the day of the sale, the Duke was still ill, but a friend sent him a sword which he had recently bought.