Canada Spends Huge Sums For Coal

Fifty-two million dollars is the bill which we, in Ontario, pay every year for the coal we buy from the United States to heat our homes.

This huge sum of money goes out of Canada every year and very little of it ever comes back.

Undoubtedly it would have a very important effect on the country's prosperity. The money which goes to pay for a ton of coal is split up in a dozen different ways.

There is another very important thing to consider just at this point. The people of the west buy a great deal of their manufactured goods from Ontario and the east. If they had more money, they would buy more goods.

When we pay $52,000,000 a year as a result of our coal bills, it means much more than simply sending that huge sum of money to a neighbouring country. If that money had stayed in Canada, it would be in general circulation.

Economists have figured that, on an average, a dollar changes hands ten times in a year. You spend it, and the man to whom you paid it, spends it again.

So that if that $52,000,000 which we spend every year on coal and freight, had stayed in Canada, it would be spent ten times during a year.

That is ten million dollars of new business in Canada. That would mean 81,500 a year jobs for 6,566 more men in this country.

Let us see what would happen to the money these men would earn. Suppose that the economists are exaggerating when they say that a dollar would turn over ten times in a year—and it is most unlikely that they are over-estimating it.

Then, as a result of these 6,566 new jobs, there would be twice that many more men needed in Canadian industries and in agriculture to supply the things this first group would need.

But a million tons of domestic coal is only a quarter of the amount central Canada uses every year. So that if we bought our entire supply at home, it would mean jobs for almost 80,000 men.

Statisticians tell us that the average family in Canada is four persons. That would mean, as far as this discussion is concerned, that every one of these new jobs would stand for a new family of four people.

In other words, if we bought our coal in Canada, we would be building a city of 320,000 people in this country.

Just A Nuisance

Winchester Press: The public spirited citizen who sets out to perform some civic service may as well settle down in the first place to accept criticism.

Whatever is done no matter how done, is bound to be criticized, most virulently by those who would not have undertaken the task themselves.

But the other kind of criticism, which must contain some sort of jealousy, is disheartening, and sometimes hardening, to the one who is honestly striving to help some project which is not his personal concern.

Keep Debts Paid Up

Mark Twain once wrote that a man should live such a life that when he died even the undertaker would be sorry.

It is difficult thing to do that but one way to come near it is to keep all debts paid. Many people have no conception of that course as a road to popularity and respect.

Many of them have no honor in regard to debts. They think that if they can get out of paying they are that much ahead.

Times Have Changed

There are people in Ontario who complain bitterly at times because we have a closed-up Sunday in this land; no place to go, nothing to do.

They want some entertainment to keep the week-end from being dull. They want some entertainment to keep the week-end from being dull. They want some entertainment to keep the week-end from being dull.
