"Pekoe" comes from the Chinese word "Pak-ho", meaning silver hair, which was applied to the tip leaves on the Chinese tea bush. Tip leaves are wavy in shape. In India they were more orange in colour, so were called "Orange Pekoe" (Pak-ho).

John Ainsley Master Thief Arthur Somers Roche

THE CLUB OF ONE-EYED MEN.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

The war left John Ainsley, a man of education and breeding, unfit for work. Hungry, poverty-stricken, he decides to become a master crook, a super-criminal. "To prey upon thieves; that shall be my career," he decides. "For if a thief is robbed, where may he look for redress?" His first venture into this is at the expense of Arthur Somers Roche, his old employer. Now installed in an apartment in Paris, the sight of all the wealth exhibited in the Place de l'Opera one spring afternoon gives a fillip to his ambition:

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

I couldn't watch the papers, ascertain when ascertaining had been committed, and then rob the perpetrators. No one but a detective genius could hope to find out who committed the crimes in the first place. And having decided that my only safety lay in working alone, I could hardly cultivate the acquaintances of criminals, and learn their plans in advance. What had seemed, for several weeks, a most excellent theory, became suddenly almost impossible of practice.

And yet the theory was sound. I assured myself of this. Because I did not see immediately how to put it into working practice proved nothing against the theory. Still, though I cheered myself with the reflection that Opportunity is never so disguised but that keen eyes may learn her identity, I was rather depressed as, dressed for dinner, I left my apartment in order to keep an engagement with some casual acquaintances met at Maxim's bar.

They were Americans, like myself, who were in Paris on business, and who had, in return for song, little esquires that I had shown them, expected a detective that I should be their guest on a tour of Montreal.

I met them at the appointed time. I had seen before all that Montreal offered, but these were pleasant chaps, gentlemen both, and it was a pleasure to associate, however casually, with one's own kind. And they could get something of a thrill from visiting the tawdry dives with which Paris is infested.

We wound up late at night at the Jardin des Tuilleries. I would rather have said good night at the door of this place. But did not wish to seem ungracious to my compatriots' hospitality. Vowing that I would not hold another glass of wine, I yielded to their importunities and entered the notorious dance-hall.

All Tonndorfians are alike; the Jardines des Tuilleries has its parallel in New York, in San Francisco. I presume that India and China could offer the clover-hunting visitors something similar. The underworld must make its contacts, somewhere, with the underworld on which it feeds.

And nowadays these contacts are broader than they were a dozen years ago. The so-called upper world has been invaded and conquered by bare-bones gamblers; the bathhouses bring to the crooks to whom their money has admitted them the crude tastes of the underworld. So long as they are allowed, they are lost who furnishes their pleasure.

Bought I saw pillars of finance engaged in the dance, women whose faces told their trade. I saw slant-eyed youths, but yesterday from the master, now stepping with women of a social position. A philosopher, noting how assiduously the upper world avoided the lower, might wonder at the proximity of difference between the two. But I was not a philosopher; I was merely a bowed and fat gentleman who wished that his friends would permit him to retire to his hotel.

One of my hosts ordered champagne. A moment later a bold-eyed girl slipped from an adjoining table. My friends in his quarry. Indeed, it seemed that he and the other man were discussing some matter of business. I would have given a great deal to overhear their conversation. Some cunning swindler tried to my own profit if I could but learn its nature.

But that was impossible. I returned with my partner to our table. As I sat down, I saw the White Eagle rise, kiss with great manner the pudgy hand of the overfed woman opposite, shake hands with her gross husband—and the other two must have been married; certainly nothing but that inexorable relation would make them endure each other's company—and leave the box.

A moment later the other two rose. The man draped about the fat and wrinkled shoulders of his companion a cane of emerald that must have cost two hundred thousand francs. He handed a bank-note to his waiter, and the servant's forehead almost touched the floor in the excess of his gratitude.

I too rose abruptly. I pleaded a sudden headache of a severity too great to be endured. I refused, almost reluctantly, the offers of my two hosts to escort me home. I would not dream of telling them of cutting short their evening's entertainment. And so they Rich in natural resources, her climate is sultry, humid, enervating, and far from conducive to activity.

I gained my hat and coat from the cloak-room, and raced out into the lobby of the dance-hall in time to see the couple whom I was following enter a limousine. I hailed a taxi and made the driver follow the car ahead. I did not wish to do anything so crude as this, but I could not follow on foot, and I wished to know where the friends of the White Eagle were staying.

I found out in a few minutes, when their car stopped before the Meurice. I dismissed my taxi and entered into conversation with the hotel porter. From him, without difficulty, and without arousing suspicion, I learned the name of the couple who had just entered the hotel. They I turned and walked to my apartment in the Rue Danton.

Graduate Studies At the University Of Toronto

The University of Toronto is gaining wide recognition for the opportunities which it offers to college graduates of pure post-graduate studies and research work. The Provincial University has always encouraged advanced and specialized studies, but in comparatively recent times the equipment has increased so greatly that the reorganization of the whole field became necessary in 1922, when the School of Graduate Studies was established with Dr. McMurchie, Professor of Anatomy, as Dean.

In 1929 there were 135 students enrolled. This year there are slightly over 200. While the large majority of students are graduates of the University of Toronto, there are men and women from over thirty other universities and colleges. Fifteen universities and colleges in Canada are represented, among them the western universities conspicuous with a total of twenty-one students of whom eleven come from British Columbia. The provision of scholarships to assist students from the west, primarily, accounts for the relatively large number drawn from those provinces. Many other countries and nationalities are represented, for instance, Russia contributes three young men who are studying the Canadian school of Architecture, and a young woman, native of India, is doing medical research work. The high reputation which this University holds throughout the world may be judged when it is realized that the foreign students select Toronto after investigating what other institutions of higher learning have to offer.

Candidates who have the requisite entrance requirements are accepted for the courses leading to the following degrees: Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.), Master of Arts (M.A.), Doctor of Medicine (M.D.), Master of Surgery (Ch.M.), Master of Applied Science (M.A.Sc.), Master of Architecture (M.Arch.), Civil Engineer (C.E.), Mining Engineer (M.E.), Mechanical Engineer (M.E.), Electrical Engineer (E.E.), Chemical Engineer (Chem.E.), Metallurgical Engineer (Met.E.), Doctor of Pharmacy (Ph.D.), Forest Engineer (F.E.), Master of Science in Agriculture, Master of Science in Dentistry (M.Sc. Dent.).

INDIAN PRINCES WELCOME MOVE TO CLEAR STATE

Some Contest British Right to Force Abdication or to Intrude Into Conduct; Frequent Appeals Made

PEOPLE'S NEEDS SET FORTH

Survey Expected to Cover Grievances of the States' Population; Prices Soar

London.—The recent announcement of the Viceroy that the Secretary of State for India has appointed a committee to go into the question of the abdication of the Indian princes with the British government is welcome news to the ruling princes of India. Considerable anxiety has prevailed in their minds during recent Vice-royalty owing to the difficulties in the way of securing settlements of certain outstanding matters. Of course their position precludes them from resorting to methods other than those of secret and tactful diplomacy, whereas the politicians of British India have no such limitations and are free to resort to any means of agitation to secure their desires.

People Voice Grievances.

The relationship to be inquiry is made on behalf to be a tripartite one, i.e., the British government, British India and the states. There is no reference subjects of the Indian states, number more than 70,000,000, commonly known that in most states the condition of the people unbearable and that official administration hardly gives them any of person and property. It is during late years that the people of the worst governed states have made bold to assemble in towns in British India and voice grievances. It would be helpful if the committee extended the of its inquiry so as to compel the aspect of the important problems Lord Irwin's humane sympathies well as Sir Edward Bulwer's popular welfare are sure to size the need for action in this matter. In that case the Indian Committee will be of wider and importance than it is at present and interested with the personal and claims of the princes.

Princes Cling to Old Status.

The remark stands like a truism nowadays, but some of the princes like those of Hyderabad, Bhopal and Cashmere, treasure the idea that many decades ago their ancestors held the same relation to the imperial government that King Ammanullah of Afghanistan and King Faud of Egypt do, and that since there has been no open conquest of their dominions since then the old relationship must be deemed to continue.

Historically the growth of imperialism in India falls into three periods. In the first period, or up to 1858, the Empire Publicity of the merchant company enforced a Board be apportioned in the line of the Empire Market, only if the operations are extended to the Dominion. The second period, or 1858 to 1877, schemes of empire, perhaps the most deplorable was one of isolating the new Empire Settlement Bill in them to the ascendancy of the paramount power. The expression "mutual alliance" gave place to "subordination" and "affiliation". After the mutiny of 1857, the Secretary of State shall have power to contravene a discriminatory bill, to Pringle Challenged.

James Spence, of the Royal Colonial Institute, in a letter to the "Daily Telegraph," challenges the allegation of C. Pringle, that Canada presently prefers Central Europe to Britain.

He says: "Can Pringle, recently his observations with the interests of any responsible state in Canada?" The assertion of preference for immigrants of British stock is incorrect, and the British especially the Scots, shown repeatedly he is capable of adapting himself to the difficult conditions of prairie farming, provided he is of the type of which Canadians rightly insist.

Consequent on this, many times during recent years, the Secretary of State has frequently been impeded to be dissatisfied either for another, as for instance, the Gaikwar of Baroda regarding his suzerainty over the Kathiawar princes, Jamisnath challenging to develop his ports as against Beniabai, the Begum of Bhopal regarding the question of succession, and so on.

The third period is now under way, so far as the imperial policy is concerned, but the treaty documents in the possession of some of the major princes do not seem to be specific as regards of that policy. The present trouble is, therefore, that they are interested in one way by the political department, and in another way by the ruling princes epiphany.

Dissatisfaction Often Yields.

Consequent on this, many times during recent years, the Secretary of State has frequently been impeded to be dissatisfied either for another, as for instance, the Gaikwar of Baroda regarding his suzerainty over the Kathiawar princes, Jamisnath challenging to develop his ports as against Beniabai, the Begum of Bhopal regarding the question of succession, and so on.

It is further contended by the prince that when one of them is guilty of impropriety or of maladministration, the British government has no right to inquire into his conduct or to require him to abdicate. This contention was put forth during the Jaffna inquiry, at the time of the Nalbhai abdication, and more recently in the case of the Mahratta of Bharatpur.

In 1918, when the Montford Reforms were on the shelf, a prince's conference voted the complaints ready on this matter, whereupon Lord Chelmsford's government asked them to point out specific instances in which the powers of the political department had been aggravated at the expense of the states.

The granting of financial autonomy to the Indian Legislature, in the constitution of which the states have participated, has swept the latter into an economic trap, and as a result the cost of living in the Indian states has increased, without the corresponding industrial development which a tame wall is expected to encourage, because the tariff revenues goes in full to the Indian Legislature. The terms of the reference to the Indian States Committee indicate an inquiry into this question also.

All these various problems make a very thorough investigation necessary and require statesmanship, and a sense of responsibility. Lord Irvin has taken a most commendable step in securing the appointment of the committee. The objects of the committee in the words of the announcement are:

to report upon the relationship between the paramount power
