Three Dundalk young people returning from a dance at Balm's Beach had an exciting experience Monday night on early Tuesday morning. A little north of Markdale a large car passed them and stopped when one of the occupants got out and signalled them to stop. The driver of the Dundalk car stepped on the gas and drove on to Markdale where the Village Constable was informed of the occurrence. After a little investigation the car stopped on its way south and when about opposite Adnesley Church the large car again appeared and the occupants again tried to stop the Dundalk car. The constable then arrested a stranger who came to Main Street from the direction the trouble took place. He was in possession of a bottle partly filled with liquor and gave his name as Love. His liquor permit was made in the name of O'Neill and he worked on an extra railway gang as Holman. Later in the day he was handed over to Provincial Constable Denton who will make a thorough investigation before proceeding with a prosecution on the charge of having liquor in an illegal place. The Dundalk party left for home at day-break, glad that Markdale provides protection for all who travel this way during the night hours.

MAYBE it has run over a stone, bruised a bump in the cellar or in the garage, but it can put new life in it.

Not the old-fashioned kind of repair. But the honest-to-goodness built-up jobs, made by the Goodyear Factory Method. These really save you money.
