The Overflow of Our Lives

By Jack Miner

One Thursday afternoon in April 1926, a big car stopped in front of my house and as three gentlemen stepped out, I recognized the familiar face of William "Pop" Stinson, of Detroit, organizer of I.W.L.A. in that vicinity, as one of the party. I at once went to the road and my friend Will introduced me to Charles Folds and James Heyworth, of Chicago, and as we four strolled about my premises we appar ently fell in love with each other, and to be truthful, I don't ever remember seeing the wild geese act more abundantly cheerful than they were that memorable afternoon for the water, land and air seemed filled with them and the swish of their wings and honking voices combined with the cooing that made the evergreens that border the goose ponds fairly echo with Godcheerfully said, "Well, Jack, you notice sweets among women." we are not saying anything.
