Keeping Warm in Cold Weather
Winter is nearly here, and the best way to defy him is to insulate against him. Insulate the house with storm windows and storm doors—some prefer weather-stripping to storm windows. Insulate your feet with stockings that are made of real woolen yarn. Fall-soles made from an old felt hat are fine, and crocheted or knitted boots are better than any bedroom slippers that can be devised. Fasten the tops to ordinary slipper soles sold for the purpose. Bed socks made without heels—just patched off—and quick long in the legs are excellent for people who suffer from cold feet in bed. Also an old woolen blanket placed over the mattress and under the sheet is a great help towards keeping warm at nights. If storm windows are loose tack strips of felt all around where they touch the sash; and if putty has come off anywhere rub the bare wood with linseed oil, then fill in with fresh putty well worked with the fingers. Left-over putty may be kept in a tight can filled with water.
