

Styles by ANETTE
Paris—New York

335

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

...the most desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

"SALADA" TEA

The Finest of All Fine Teas

The Romance of Men in Scarlet

Records of Royal Canadian Mounted Police Replete With Heroism and Adventure—Detachment Stationed at Jasper National Park

Romance dies hard. There is something wrong with the judgment of those who dolefully shake their heads at this mechanical age and long for "the good old days." If they only knew there is as much glamor about a twentieth-century existence as there ever was about the good old-fashioned, creaking jolting stage coaches—and a hundred times more comfort. What the doleful ones forget is that romance began with the times. Romance is eternal. It does not die. It changes. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police has had its share of glamor and in glamor it has grown to maturity. Times have changed since the Blackfoot went scamping over the plains. In the seventies, the fever of the Klondike has glimmered out; the plains have given themselves to farms and cities but it has never changed the "Mounties" have changed to meet the times. They have pushed to the reaches of the white North; they have taken to themselves a new glamor. The tradition of the romantic past and the romance of the present are symbolized in the scarlet tunic. It is a tunic that gives to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police a certain glamor and a certain respectability. It is a tunic that has made the "Mounties" a household name. It is a tunic that has made the "Mounties" a household name.

When the City of Winnipeg was a scrap heap of shacks, also the North West Mounted Police force was born. It was in the winter of 1873. Canada itself was only six years old. As someone has said, it was significant that the force should come to life in winter. It was a symbol of the hardships the policemen were to undergo and of the courage and steadfastness with which they were to endure them. Quartered at Lower Fort Garry, on the Red River, near Winnipeg, the 150 clerks, farmers and carriage-makers who were the original members of the force were to undergo a rigorous training. It was they who were to start the ball rolling to fulfill the dream of Sir John A. Macdonald, the Dominion's first premier, for a mobile force that would patrol the outlying stretches of the country, linking the British Columbia with the eastern provinces, and prevent whiskey-smuggling. They were paid 50 cents a day and if their feelings exploded in the vicinity of a non-commissioned officer they were liable to lose a ten-dollar bill out of it. As the handful of greenhorns who had to administer 300,000 square miles of territory, was put in, the sergeant and his men were to be in much greater, because the first 150, after a lusty winter, were now swagging veterans.

In '74, the handiwork of the force in the West, handicapped right from the start by inexperience, lack of equipment, the force crossed the plains from "Bridges and another handful of greenhorns, and went to the foot of the Rockies. Those were the genuine wild and woolly days when a letter such as this, from a man at Whoop Up manifested the temperature of the country.

"Dear Friend, my partner Will Geary got to putting on airs and shot him and he is dead the next day looking well. Yours truly Snookum Jim."

In Red River carts, squeaking and shrieking to the four winds of the prairie, on weary horses on foot, the "Mounties" of '74 made their historic trek to the mountains. They battled prairie fires, they suffered heat and cold and drenching rains; they were plagued by grasshoppers and mistletoe mirages and deceitful guides. But out of that travail, out of those dreadful 1,000 miles, was born the esprit de corps for which the force is famous to this day.

As an illustration of the superhuman tasks imposed on the force, nothing could be better than this: the detachment at Lindenau, con-

Interesting Japan Customs Centuries Old

A SCENE AT THE CORONATION OF THE MIKADO of the Mikoshi who gathered from all parts of the Empire to dance before the Imperial Palace on the morning of the coronation as their forefathers had done for over two thousand years.

The religious pageant of the Mikoshi who gathered from all parts of the Empire to dance before the Imperial Palace on the morning of the coronation as their forefathers had done for over two thousand years.

World Honors Amundsen's Memory Norway Observes Two Minutes Silence—Bells Toll All Day—Noble Sends Message

Copenhagen—All Norway paid tribute recently to the memory of Captain Roald Amundsen who discovered the South Pole seventeen years ago. Thousands of people assembled in the streets of Oslo and stood bareheaded for the two minutes of silence that was observed throughout the nation.

The official ceremony at Oslo was attended by King Haakon, Crown Prince Olaf, members of the cabinet and the Italian mission which arrived especially to show Italy's admiration for Amundsen.

Poland Ten Years After Development of New War Attributed to U.S.

It was on the origin of the war, Nov. 11, 1918 that Germany, again became an ally.

Sport Wins English Town Prefers Tennis Courts to Roman Temples

Colchester, England—This ancient town is in the throes of a controversy between age and youth, archeology and sprouting tennis stars.

CASTRATED CHILD

Constitution is one of the most important of children's health. To keep the child healthy, the mother must be kept in the best of health.

THEY'RE BEAUTIFUL She! The West had wonderful mountains—so beautiful! He! Yes, lots of them are buttocks.

It is when a hotting stock market begins to cool that the water becomes most evident.

Trinity Co. Sets High Record

Supplies Three Rhodes Scholars During Past Year

MARKED F

The award of three Rhodes Scholarships for 1927 to Mr. George Wright, a student in Arts in Trinity College, Toronto, is a notable achievement. This is the first time in which Trinity College has been awarded a Rhodes Scholarship.

OW LAFFS

During the British Open Championship golf tournament, a humorous incident occurred. One of the players, a well-known professional, was giving lessons to a distinguished personage.

Hearts, No

When the nuts both large and small, Man is the only one of all, Who can be shamed the second time.

AVOID WATER ILLS AND DISCOMFORTS

THE SOUTHERN

THE G

THEY'RE BEAUTIFUL

FREE INFORMATION AND SERVICE

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R. R.

ISSUE No. 52-28

ISSUE No. 52-28