COMFORT

Perhaps the most comfortable-looking sight in the world is a man sitting in an easy chair with a pipe and a book on a table.

No matter what his rank or position may be, the man who has a book in his hands is the richest and happiest of the children of men.

How often we have wished that our village library could have a commodious place for its housing.

which seems to be the camel which has pretty well showed everything else out of the tent in our community library.

The Armchair

The Old Parsonage. The Continuation School Commencement play was a bright, merry little comedy.

Why have we not such a place for our community library? Is it the old matter of dollars and cents?

At all events, most of us might very wisely decide to do more reading, and better reading, during 1929.

Perhaps this habit of reading is a good thing, but it is not a new thing.

And where there are children, a problem solved. Children who love reading are not likely to give much trouble through wanting to be on the street.

A section for each kind of book, with bookcases so low that the people in search of a book might stroll along the shelves, on a "book-hill" ended when the light one is found.

of eight on a sketching trip to a "bliss wood field" just outside of the city limits.

At last I came to the conclusion that something diseased must be at the back of such queer notions, and asked my Doctor about it.

One evening I asked her if anything had ever happened when she was a child to make her afraid; and she told me of having gone to visit an older woman once when she was very young.

They are strange things, these complexes and it is well to know a little about them, especially if one has anything to do with children or young people.

What the doctor told me that there are many complexes which may be developed in us.

On another occasion, she loved me very early in July, she proposed to go to the "book-hill" to get some wild strawberries.

THE THOUGHT-BOX. A beautiful form is better than a beautiful face; a beautiful behavior is better than a beautiful form.

There has been a record crop. The West will continue to flourish. In a thousand cases, a few years of struggle with nature has been rewarded.

Just to illustrate western crop effects. The printing establishment has had an extra order of checks and money orders.
