

Healthfulness

DED

WAT

...baked...
...powful of...
...cold days

...the Hills

oured

...er every...
...chal

Dyes
...fect results...
...15%

India To-day and Ghandi's Stand

Lord Irwin, the Viceroy, Appeals For Good Faith While the Simon Commission Continues its Difficult Task

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

The Gandhi Resolution. The Indian National Congress voted for Dominion Status, adopting the resolution moved by Mr. Gandhi. The resolution was as follows: "This Congress having considered the constitution recommended by the All Parties Committee report, welcomes it as a great contribution towards the solution of India's political and communal problems, and congratulates the Committee on the virtual unanimity of its recommendations; and whilst adhering to the resolution and to complete independence, it is prepared to accept the Dominion Status as a first step in the direction of the goal of complete independence."

Implications, its rights and obligations, which both parties will be in honor bound to respect and uphold. But as Mahatma has put it, we would not hesitate to sever all connection, if severance became necessary through Britain's own fault. It is conceivable that we may be driven to separation by the treatment accorded to us by Britain herself, and in that case we shall have precisely the same remedy as the Dominions now have.

"Our destination is Freedom, the form and extent of which will depend upon the time when, and the circumstances under which, it comes."

Referring to the resolution quoted in the Times of India, in a leader, says: "The real significance of the action taken by the Congress is, in our belief, not to be found so much in the resolution which was adopted as in the actual voting. It will be noticed that the amendment moved by Mr. Bose in favor of complete independence was lost by 1,350 to 973 votes. The Independence Party are gaining ground."

"There is no cause for jubilation in the fact that the Congress has conditionally accepted Dominion Status as the goal in view, because consistent with the above, nothing in this resolution shall interfere with the carrying on in the name of the Congress of propaganda for complete independence. That propaganda will now be carried out all the more vigorously because the 'compromise' resolution has been passed.

"The old leaders will be pushed aside and we are quite prepared within a year to hear Pandit Motilal Nehru denounced as a reactionary or a conservative. The older men have risked a storm which they cannot control, and Mr. Gandhi, quite oblivious of how his former prophecies and promises were falsified, is rejecting the whole teaching of his experience."

"Not only is he promising Dominion Status within a year, but he has once again begun to talk on organizing a full national political strike, which he knows from his previous Himalayan blunders cannot be non-violent. The best thing that can be said for him in doing this is that he has given Government a very clear warning."

The Viceroy's Reply. Lord Irwin, in his address to the Indian Legislative Assembly recently said: "I see very clearly that nothing but a full national political strike, unless a particular condition is fulfilled, which I believe, to be mechanically impossible of fulfillment from the outset, an attempt will be made to plunge the country into all the possible chaos of civil disobedience."

"I recognize that, although many leaders and schools of political opinion in India will refuse to walk along the dangerous path of non-cooperation, many of them openly protest distrust of the attitude of Great Britain towards this country. They say, and would have others to believe, that hitherto Great Britain has given no sufficient proof of her intention to fulfill the pledge Mr. Montagu gave on behalf of his Majesty's Government in 1917, and that Great Britain is seeking to forget or deny the high policy there enshrined."

"I tell this Assembly again, and through them India, that the declaration of 1917 stands, and will stand for all time, as the solemn pledge of the British people to do all that can be done by one people to assist another to attain full national political status, and that pledge so given will never be dishonored. And I will add that I should not be standing before you here to-day as Governor-General if I believed that the British people had withdrawn their hand from that solemn covenant."

"Gentlemen of the Assembly, though we may differ on all other issues, let us not readily or lightly impugn the good faith of one another, for that is to destroy the very foundation of all hope of better things."

"Those, therefore, who can give public opinion in this country are doing no service to India if they accuse me to think highly of disobedience to constitute authority, what ever the title by which such disobedience may be described."

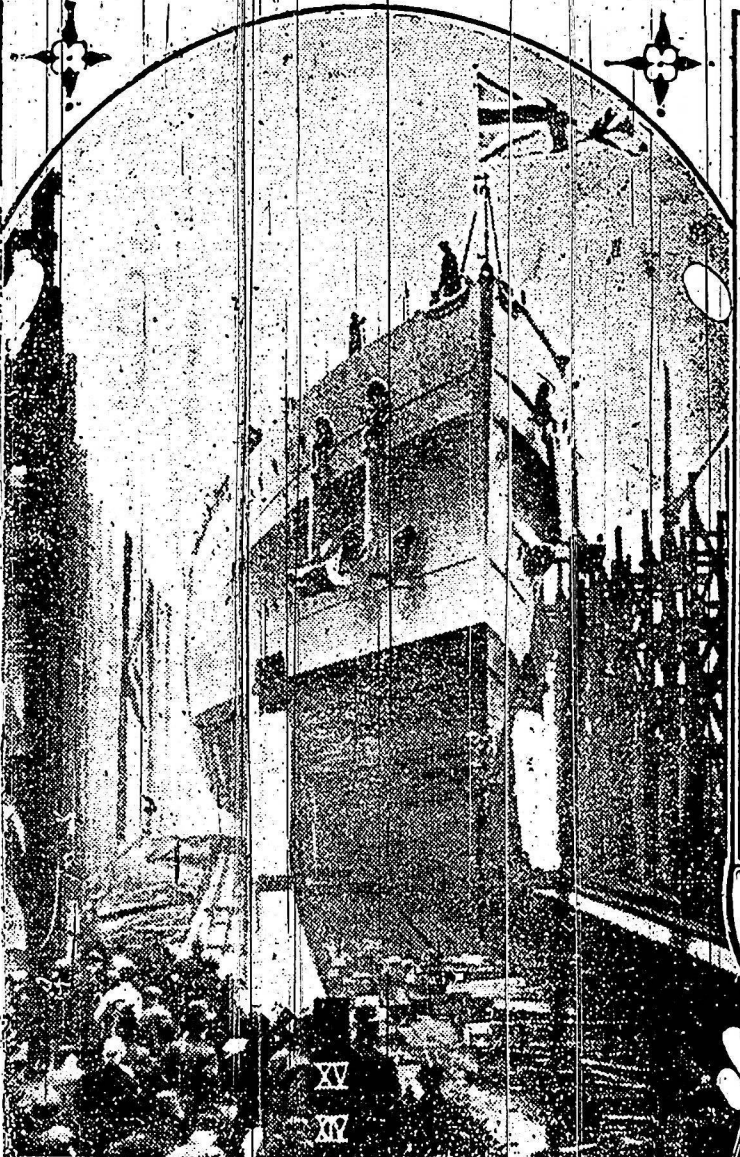

Greater Saskatchewan. Saskatchewan, third in population of the Canadian Provinces, with an area of 151,700 square miles, is seeking an outlet to the sea at Chesterfield Inlet on Hudson Bay and expansion north to Coronation Gulf, 200 miles beyond the Arctic Circle. An application has been made to the Dominion Government by Premier Gardiner, who says: "We claim that our natural mineral area extends out of the northern part of our province into the territory that we are asking to be added to the province. Second, the natural outlet to the sea from this mineral area to the Hudson Bay is through Chesterfield Inlet."

The land which Saskatchewan desires to annex is a part of two vast Northwest Territories, which are bounded by Hudson Bay on the east, the Arctic on the north and Yukon on the west. Manitoba will have something to say about the acquisition of the Chesterfield Inlet region of Saskatchewan, for it lies directly north of Manitoba's border. The Northwestern Territories known as Mackenzie and Keewatin would have been divided among Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The last also claims mineral resources and bids fair to be rich in oil. British Columbia, fronting on the Pacific, might put in a claim for the great Mackenzie River Valley, if there is to be a division of the lake and barren country.

It would seem to be only fair to give Saskatchewan access to northern Hudson Bay at Chesterfield Inlet, for Manitoba has Port Nelson, which is destined to be a railway terminal. At the root of the whole matter is the belief that there may be a great deal of mineral wealth above the sixtieth degree of latitude.

We are anxious to have world peace, but see no reason for fighting over it.

The British Navy Keeps Ahead

LAUNCHING OF BRITAIN'S NEWEST CRUISER. H.M.S. Dorsetshire, the latest addition to the British navy, launched recently at Portsmouth, England. The Dorsetshire, the latest in 10,000-ton cruisers, is shown sliding down the ways.

Farm Notes

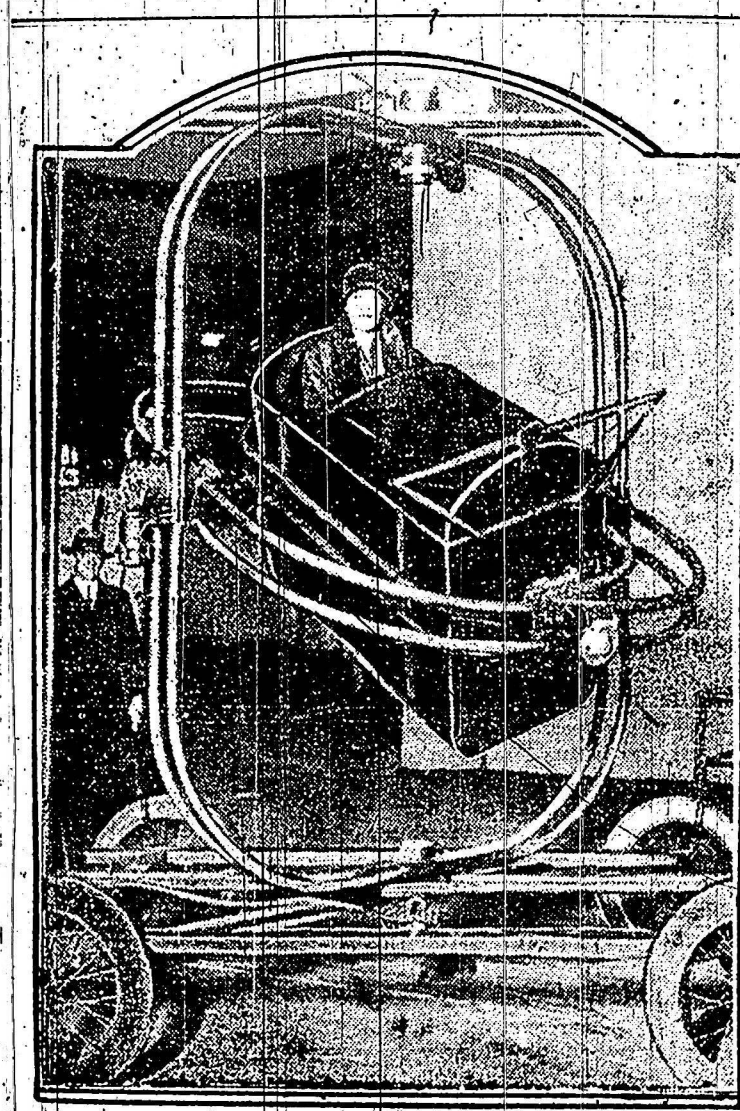

SUPPLEMENTARY RATION FOR BREEDING POULTRY

It is now being recognized that the fertility, hatchability and vitality of eggs may be influenced by the manner of feeding the laying hens. During the hatching season the Experimental Station at Kentville, N.S., carried out an experiment to determine the effects of using such supplementary feeds as cod liver oil, raw liver, bone meal, etc., which in addition to the regulation ration given to the breeding stock. The regulation ration used consisted of dry mash made up of 100 pounds each of cornmeal, oatmeal, bran and middlings, and 50 pounds of heavy 24 pound sack of wheat added to every 100 pounds of the mixture. The test groups of hens were fed on this mixture; in addition some of the hens received, when fed singly, cod liver oil, 1 teaspoonful to four birds daily; and bone meal, 5 percent by weight of dry mash. When these special feeds were given, in combination only half of these amounts were used.

The experiment was divided into two parts with a week elapsing between them. The results of this experiment are given in detail in the report of the superintendent of the station for 1927, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. The most outstanding conclusion to be arrived at from the study of this report, which may be obtained at the Public Branch is that the peas using the cod liver oil were outstandingly, particularly in the percentage of hatchability of eggs in.

THE PRODUCTION OF PURE SEED DEPENDANT VARIETIES

In the great wheat growing areas of Western Canada the kind of seed of varieties adapted to the growing district is of great importance. Investigations carried on by the Central Division of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, as well as at other institutions, indicate the need

PREMIER U.S. AVIATRIX TRIES OUT AN 'ORIENTATOR'. Amelia Earhart tries out the Ruggles-Orientator, a device used for testing applicants for pilots' licenses, at the New York Aviation Show at the Grand Central Palace.

"The King!" A Fine Tribute

One of the Many Hundreds of Eulogies From U.S.A.

The newspapers have made constant reference to the sympathetic interest of America in the illness of the King. It has received in most United States newspapers the chief position in the news pages day after day for many weeks and we wish we could give a title of the kindly feelings which have been expressed in papers of all shades of opinion. We feel that the typical article by F. H. Ybarra which appears in "The Outlook" of New York will delight our readers, and we can assure them that it is symbolic of many. The writer says: "All who have attended banquets in England know how Englishmen react when the toast to the King is proposed. The chairman gets up and says, 'King!' Every man present leaps to his feet, raises his glass and touches it to his lips from all over the hall come shouts of 'The King! The King!'"

"It lasts only a moment; it is done at every banquet held anywhere in the British Isles. Yet there is never anything perfunctory about it. Into his attitude as he stands and raises his glass, into his enunciation of those two short words, every Englishman puts unmistakable something of affection and reverence, a ring of pride and loyalty, which cannot but strike even the most anti-monarchical of republicans with admiration."

"It is the stamp at the close of every theatrical performance in Britain when the orchestra plays 'God Save the King.' That, too, lasts only a moment, but comes when men and women are preparing to leave the theatre, when they are reaching for wraps and hats. Yet here also there is absolutely nothing that savors of the perfunctory. Every Englishman stands straight and stiff, like a soldier every where, his face expressive of the feeling; in the presence of such sincerity every foreigner of good taste must needs put into his own attitude at least the outward semblance of a similar homage."

"The feeling which the British have for their sovereign was admirably shown during the days when King George V lay dangerously ill in Buckingham Palace. All day and all night into the night thousands of men, women and children stood outside the palace gates. Every bulletin was eagerly read as soon as it was posted; many in the crowd called out every word in these bulletins in order to tell those at home exactly the King's condition."

"The crowds were people of every class; nobles and prelates, soldiers with humble folk from the London slums all had become equal in their zeal to cheer for their King. And exactly as at banquets when the sovereign's health is proposed, exactly as in theatres when 'God Save the King' is played, there was not a trace among the thousands who stood in silent vigil outside the great gates of King George's residence, of any perfunctory or ungrateful attitude towards a 'shah.'"

"Every Englishman and Englishwoman in those crowds was there because he or she was genuinely worried. The feeling which brought these crowds there was the same feeling that underlies those joyous and proud toasts to 'The King'—the same feeling exactly, but abridged in sincerity, as if the sick man's subjects stood in the royal sickroom."

"No Subject Oversteers It. Americans who have lived in England are aware of the English individual attitude toward the King and the other members of the British royal family. In his conversation about them, free though it may appear as perfectly, there is an inviolable barrier which is never overstepped. And just as no British subject oversteers it, no foreigner with a regard for decency will seek to pass it."

"He will let an Englishman tell anecdotes about his King and Queen, about the Prince of Wales and his brothers, which could scarcely be better tolerated for frankness; he will let him express semi-humorous opinions which, taken seriously, smack of lese-majeste. But if he be a foreigner of penetration—he will be constantly on his guard as to what comments he may himself contribute. To each one of his hearers it is always there, the alien who permits himself a remark about the British royal family of a sort which a Briton may consider as beyond the bounds of good taste. Unlike a native of Italy or some other country where men have fiery blood, there will be no theatricalism, no excited challenges to a duel."

Everybody Who Knows the English. The Britisher will simply live that foreigner a freezing look; maybe he will follow up with a freezing retort, and everybody who knows the English knows that, in the whole length and breadth of this universe, there is not a nation capable of competing with them in the gentle art of freezing. "So the foreigner, if he be wise, will let the Briton do the talking about the British royal family. Also, there will be no theatricalism, no excited challenges to a duel, no something of a sincere ring into his voice when he responds to the toast 'The King!' at his next banquet in England."

The Stray

A Slight Sketch From Life

She was just a little bird, was mated, tangled, dirty hair; laugh; by illness, hunger, and neglect, to be afraid of everything and to trust to nothing except her own little thread legs.

"I don't know how long she had been sick and weak, but she was in a deplorable condition when I first saw her. Some noisy schoolboys on roller skates were chasing her, and in answer to my exhortations they said: 'Please, miss, it's only a stray!'"

"I missed her down a side street, and she was searching the gutter for food, with famished looks. 'Presently we came to a great building, and through the open gate we could see a school playground. In a stony man I observed a crowd of great flock of plovers."

"Presently we came to a great building, and through the open gate we could see a school playground. In a stony man I observed a crowd of great flock of plovers. 'The man was the caretaker of the school, and a poor, broad to all and lame. When he saw my small, shabby kind of dog, he said: 'What a good dog! At that he carefully closed the playground gate and tried to catch the stray.'"

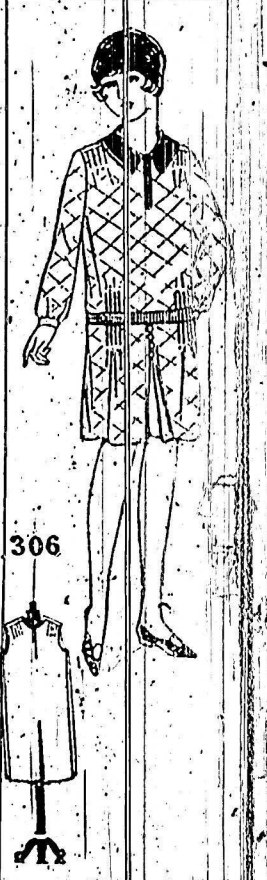

"For all that, couldn't he catch her near her, or I gave her her last remaining speed. While she was looking for food, she came into a garden and called his wife a kindly soul, a big blue apron. Together they took the dog to the kitchen and she threw her blue apron over to me, then she was caught. She was very fat and her hair was a mass of tangled brush and blood-stained tresses. She was heavy with milk."

"She lay trembling with terror, as if from her captors. Instead, she was gently carried into a warm room and placed on a mat. She must have been brought for she was thin and well, and her dirty, tangled hair was clean and fine, and her frightened eyes were dark and bright. Her new dress brought her food and tried to reassure her, but she crunched close to the wall, trembling, with her head down, for nearly fifteen minutes."

"At length the kind strokes and pats and the food and smell of food prevailed. She turned round towards the plate, smiling, and suddenly started when she saw a man. Her new dress was a fine, light-colored material. She was very fat and her hair was a mass of tangled brush and blood-stained tresses. She was heavy with milk."

"The man was the caretaker of the school, and a poor, broad to all and lame. When he saw my small, shabby kind of dog, he said: 'What a good dog! At that he carefully closed the playground gate and tried to catch the stray.'"

"The man was the caretaker of the school, and a poor, broad to all and lame. When he saw my small, shabby kind of dog, he said: 'What a good dog! At that he carefully closed the playground gate and tried to catch the stray.'"

306

Economic Slavery

The British and American people are being misled by the propaganda of the League of Nations, which is a tool of the international financiers. The League of Nations is a tool of the international financiers, and its purpose is to keep the world in a state of economic slavery. The League of Nations is a tool of the international financiers, and its purpose is to keep the world in a state of economic slavery. The League of Nations is a tool of the international financiers, and its purpose is to keep the world in a state of economic slavery.

Inter-Empire Trade

Manitoba Free Press. Empire trade has much to offer. In a business way and a mental way, it offers many advantages. The trouble comes when the Empire trade is not a free trade, but a trade that is controlled by a few interests. The trouble comes when the Empire trade is not a free trade, but a trade that is controlled by a few interests. The trouble comes when the Empire trade is not a free trade, but a trade that is controlled by a few interests.

NOT A PEST

Next time you see a member that weeds make his liability mean. The Kellogg Treaty, however, it is the nation that is the pest. Fortunately, it is not a pest that can be prolonged on more gas.

The Unity of the Empire

Saint John's Free Press. Already the Empire exists as something approaching a customs union and it is daily becoming more truly so. The Empire will eventually be the greatest, the most comprehensive and the most self-contained union in the world. Membership in it will be far more valuable to a nation than membership in either a European or American union.

St. Lawrence Waterway

Halifax Herald (Cols.). Sooner or later the people of Canada will have to decide this question: its immense and far-reaching possibilities make it a problem too large to be disposed of by any Government or Parliament unaided by the people themselves. True it will be debated at Ottawa—but it will be decided in the constituencies.