

Eat What You Like But Don't Be Greedy

By A. Marshall

People have always paid a lot of attention to eating and drinking, chiefly because they liked doing it, and, of course, there is no harm in that as long as it does not make them greedy. Even when they were greedy, they were not greedy in the way that we are greedy now. They were greedy in the way that a pig is greedy. They would eat and drink until they were full, and then they would stop. They would not eat and drink until they were sick. They would not eat and drink until they were dead. They would not eat and drink until they were in pain. They would not eat and drink until they were in trouble. They would not eat and drink until they were in danger. They would not eat and drink until they were in distress. They would not eat and drink until they were in agony. They would not eat and drink until they were in torment. They would not eat and drink until they were in hell.

Fogs and Influenza

Manchou Chuanlin (Lib.) (The Director-General of Health in Australia has established the fact that the influenza epidemic of last winter started in the Friendly Isles of the South Seas from which salubrious archipelago it made its way all over the world.) Those who imagine that influenza is a specific product of a foggy winter and that the English climate can more take all the blame must revise their views. The beachcomber who basks all day in the unlimited sunshine of a coral island is in even greater danger than the urban Englishman going to the crowded office in the soaking rain. We are but the residual legates of the pestilences bred in the islands of the heat. Science may hunt the bacteria thus far, but what can it do when it has finally discovered the lair and can read learned papers on where the germs go in the summer-time? Are we to draw a sanitary cord round the Pacific and keep our fogs uncontaminated by South Sea bacilli? It would be nice to try, for the part of the globe whose exports are the influenza, the influenza, and the influenza.

Best War Brains Thrust Aside

William Hughes in His Book "The Splendid Adventure" Reviews Empire Relative

Always known as a hard hitter, Mr. William Hughes, who was Premier of Australia during the war, has many cutting things to say in his book, "The Splendid Adventure," which is a review of Empire relations.

Montmark and Mont Royal

New York World. (Monte Carlo) that "at a season when Paris ought to have at least ten Americans to every three seats in a dining car, there are in fact comparatively few Americans to be seen. For this the tourist agency blames the fact that imposed in France on foreign travelers and the well-mannered bathhouse which it believes has lured tourists into other countries, particularly into Germany and England. Two other hypotheses seem reasonable. First, that the volume of tourist travel has been so enormous in recent years that Paris, for all its charm, has lost its novelty. Second, that when people go home than Europe have Ontario and Quebec, both of which, now being wet, are able to satisfy at least in part the interests which formerly look thousands of Americans to the capital of the French Republic. It is at least interesting to note that travel from America to Canada is increasing even more rapidly than travel to Europe, and that no less than 2,415,125 American automobiles (1,099 cars a day) crossed the Canadian frontier in 1922 in the words of the Government, "on touring purposes."

The American Tariff and Empire Trade

La Presse (Ind.). Whatever they do the United States will still need Canada for their supplies of raw products and in a great number of their principal industries. Their purchases of raw and semi-manufactured Canadian products annually reach a figure of five hundred million dollars a year. Although they may increase their tariff, they cannot, according to the Hon. James Malcolm, sensibly reduce the amount of their imports, whilst we, on the other hand, can easily cut off many of our imports from the United States, either by increasing domestic production, or making more of our purchases in Great Britain or the Dominions. This the balance of Canadian trade will become in favor of the Empire, instead of the United States, as at present.

What Diet Feeds Miss

When people have become civilized they like to talk to each other while they are eating and drinking instead of just gorging as much as they can and sleeping it off afterwards, and they even have tea parties because of that which savages don't do. So you miss a lot of civilization when you bring it all down to orange juice or wats or vitamins, and clearing your brain isn't worth it, especially if it isn't much of a brain even when it is cleared.

Sunspots Blamed For Earthquakes

French Savant Insists on Influence of These Solar Phenomena

Paris.—In a recent issue of "Le Petit Journal" the Abbe Th. Moreux, director of the Observatory of Bourges, discussed the always interesting question of earthquakes periodicity on which he is a recognized authority. He said:

"It seems to be still the style in certain official quarters to deny periodicity in earthquakes. In fact, we register, one year and another about 3,000 shocks, but as far as intensity goes the years do not resemble one another.

"As our technique improves we succeed in noting the slightest seismic manifestations as far as long as a study of the phenomena with a magnifying glass the broad laws which regulate them will very probably escape him.

"Here is a fact analogous to what the astronomers observe. At present our instruments have attained such precision that we can detect the slightest perturbation in the march of the planets. These are far from following orbits absolutely elliptical, so that the general laws of celestial mechanics would be more difficult to outline now than when Kepler laid them down for the first time with the aid of rudimentary observations.

"All the same one would have an incredible lack of good sense not to notice in certain years seismic phenomena of extraordinary amplitude.

"That we passed through such a crisis in 1922 cannot be doubted by those who read the newspaper regularly. I announced that crisis, after November 23, 1922, also in the following January. It was, moreover, not my first venture of this sort, since my first prevision dates from 1902.

"If I insist on this point it is not at all to grant myself the title of prophet. There are enough Neostadams in the thirty years in which I have studied the sun. I have, asserted, in all quarters of the world that all our climatology depends on the sun. My campaign caused smiles at first, and at the beginning they called me, maliciously, the 'hammer of the sun.' But now the hammer is so far advanced that it is a question as to who is entitled to the honor of having discovered that the sun's spots engender all calamities.

"In fact, those who have followed my work knew very well that the sun spots are only one single manifestation of the general activity of the great star.

"To claim that this activity has only exercised an influence on our exterior meteorology—rain, seasons, temperatures—but also on what I call endogenous meteorology—[but which goes on under our feet]

Work

Let me but do my work from day to day, in field or forest, at the desk or loom, in printing market place or tranquil room; Let me but find it in my heart to say, When vagrant wishes beckon me astray, 'This is my work; my blessing, not my doom; Of all who live, I am the one by whom This work can best be done in the right way.'

Then shall I see it not too great, nor small, To suit my spirit and to prove my powers; Then shall I cheerfully greet the laboring hours, And cheerful turn, when the long eventide, to love and play and rest, Because I know for many a work is best.

—Van Dyke in "Forbes."

Just As Good

There was no galsaying the fact that P.C. Roberts was an outside. His feet covered quite a large area when placed together, and they left deep impressions where he stood.

So perhaps the little girl who was spreading sandy gravel over the garden path may be forgiven, for, as the worthy officer passed the gate for the second time in five minutes, she ran across to him.

"May I ask you something?" she inquired.

"Ask away, missie," beamed the constable, and ticked his thumbs into his belt.

"Then would you mind walking up and down my path a bit? It's so uneven, and I haven't got a garden roller."

Proof Positive

The mail before the magistrate was a stranger in the village, and he was most indignant that he should suffer the humiliation of his present condition.

"The constable seems very certain about all the facts connected with my case," he sneered. "But, if I may make so bold to point out a certain weakness, why doesn't he call his fellow officer to corroborate his evidence?"

"There is only one constable stationed in the village," said the magistrate sharply.

"Excuse me, but I saw two last night," protested the offender.

"Excuse," grinned the policeman. "That's the charge against you."

Merely to make a living is a very low ambition. We are here for something much higher than that. We are here to make a life that is immortal, to gain treasures to carry with us in to the eternal.
