On Wings of Wireless

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

(CHAPTER I.—Cont'd.)

"What the fellow in the tower Glenn ... you think?"

"I see like him, sir."

"Who was the girl?"

"I can't say, sir."

"That will do, John," motioned ... Warwick.

... was something in her tone ... Garrick from insisting ... it of the identity of the ... girl.

... touched his hat and return... ... ear quicker than he had left it.

Garrick turned to say toward Mrs. Walden. "What does Ruth say? Who was up there? Was she in the tower?"

Mrs. Walden looked away and mur... "Ruth refused to say any... thing."

"Well, let me see," mused Garrick, "I'll ask Ruth myself. She can't refuse me."

"Don't be too sure," warned
