

The Romance Of Buried Treasure

By CLIFFORD COLLINSON

It has become the habit to think of buried treasure in terms of pirates and Spanish gold, but just think for a moment of all the vast riches belonging to vanished kings and famous generals who, from the beginning of history, have plundered the riches of men. Where is the loot of ancient Rome, and where the glittering treasure of Saragossa? Where is the vast wealth of Antioch and what has become of the great jewels which Solomon gave to the Queen of Sheba? Considering the thousands of years of warfare which have ravaged the world, it takes but little imagination to realize that every time the battling hordes have met and fought, much treasure was hurriedly buried to preserve it until the wave had passed. In many cases those who buried it were slain and the treasure still awaits the seeker. From my own experience I can assure you that booty by the same sort of thing, but on a much smaller scale, of course, has happened in the British Solomon Islands. It is a fact that there are thousands of golden sovereigns buried away in various places in the interior of the cannibal island of Malaita-plantation wages which have been hidden in the ground and the hoards of which is now lost because of the sudden and violent death in tribal warfare of the owners.

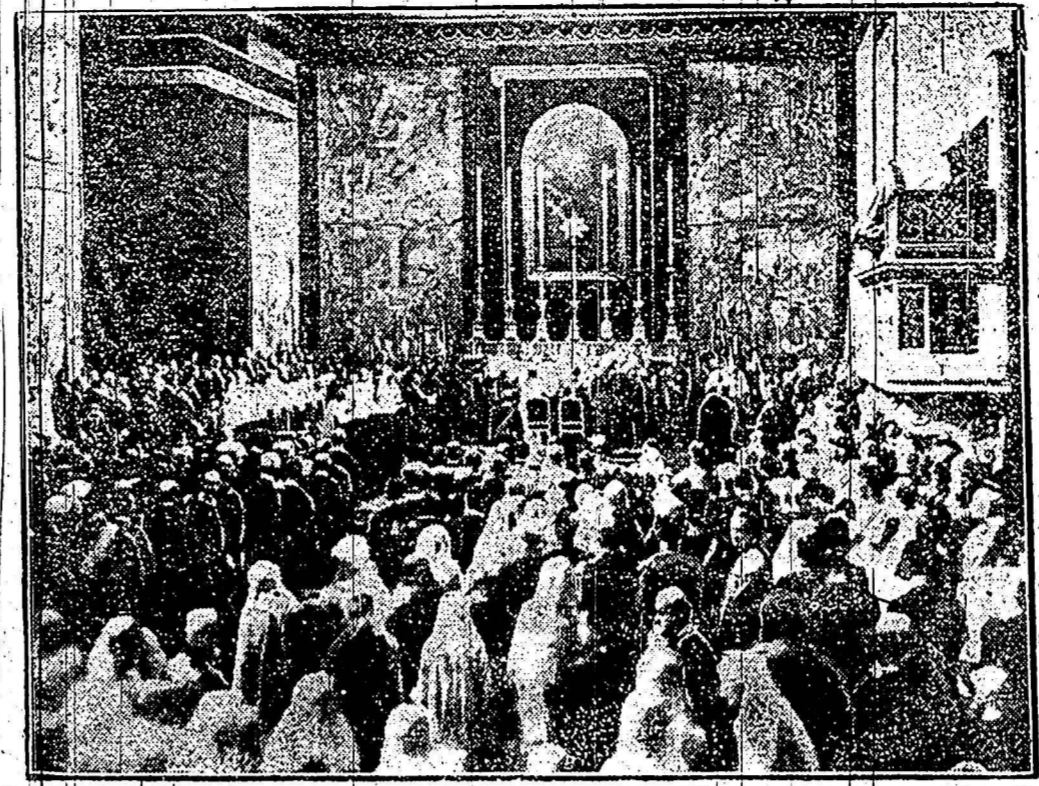

But there is buried treasure nearer home than that. From the immemorial tradition had it that a great treasure was buried near the Ribbie in Lancashire. A saying had been handed down that anyone standing on the hill of Ribbie-Dale and looking up the valley would see the ever-viel greatest treasure that England had ever known. Search was started on the hill in 1821, and many miners were employed. In 1824, a quantity of silver was discovered, but it was not until 1826 that the treasure was found. It consisted of 10,000 silver pieces, and was valued at £100,000. The treasure was buried by a man named John Smith, who had hidden it away in the Ribbie-Dale valley. The treasure was found by a man named John Smith, who had hidden it away in the Ribbie-Dale valley.

Canada Has Enough of Own
The Canadian government has announced that it will not accept any more foreign investment in the oil industry. This decision is based on the fact that Canada has enough of its own oil resources to meet its needs. The government is concerned about the potential loss of control over the country's oil reserves. It is believed that this decision will encourage the development of domestic oil production and reduce the country's dependence on foreign oil.

of them, they would forget who he was. With his enormous black beard bristling with challenge, he swaggered and roared through the streets of Charleston and terrorized the seas. With grim playfulness he would part his great beard into tresses, tie them with dainty ribbons and then drape these girly lovelocks over his ears. When going inland, as he carried six pistols and three cutlasses, and fastened lighted matches under his hat. A proper pirate was blackbeard. He was slain 260 years ago by Lt. Maynard after a long and desperate sea-fight, and the gallant lieutenant cut off his head, black beard and all, and returned long in triumph with it floating from his bowsprit for all to see.

The famous Captain Morgan buried some of his treasure, so it is said, in the interior of Panama. From the looting of Panama alone he took booty to the value of two million dollars. He had no need to hide it for King Charles the Second hidged him, and he spent his remaining years in Jamaica as a rich and influential personage in high favor with the ruling powers, and a terror to the luckless, beggared comrades who had helped him to win his fortune. And so the story might be told of many other buried treasures, but in spite of all the clear evidence to the contrary, fertile imagination and incurable optimism have built up a false legend, and even to the present day treasure-seekers are digging for the supposed hidden wealth of Lafitte and Morgan and others of the Spanish and Crossbones pirates.

It seems a pity to waste time on false trails like these when there is so much that we know for certain is only waiting to be found. The Spanish Armada, which in 1588, was defeated by the English, is believed to have buried treasure in the Azores. The Spanish ship, the Santa Catalina, is believed to have buried treasure in the Azores. The treasure is believed to be worth millions of dollars. The treasure is believed to be worth millions of dollars.

View of interior of Pauline Chapel in Quirina, Rome, during the wedding ceremony of Crown Prince Umberto and Princess Marie Jose of Belgium.

Amazing Drama of A Mystic Gold Mine

Murdered Man Guarded by His Dog

London, June 15.—A dramatic and mysterious case is being investigated by the police in London. The case involves the murder of a man named Arthur Rockford, who was found dead in a mine. The man was guarded by his dog, which was found with him. The police are trying to determine how the man was killed and why he was in the mine.

The dog was found in a cage, and the man was found in a mine. The man was found in a mine, and the dog was found in a cage. The man was found in a mine, and the dog was found in a cage. The man was found in a mine, and the dog was found in a cage.

Arthur Rockford was a man of means, and he was found in a mine. The man was found in a mine, and the dog was found in a cage. The man was found in a mine, and the dog was found in a cage. The man was found in a mine, and the dog was found in a cage.

Very Big Ideas

Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah Sends First Abyssinian Envoy to Italy

Rome, June 15.—The Abyssinian Emperor has just established a legation in Rome, and the first Abyssinian envoy accredited to the Italian court has presented his letters of credence to King Victor Emmanuel. The letter of credence is a style which varies from the usual style usually used in such documents, and reads as follows: "Zoditu Menelik, Emperor of Ethiopia, King of the Tribe of Judah, and Emperor of the Abyssinian Empire, sends his most respectful greetings to His Majesty, King Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy, and wishes to improve and consolidate the friendly relations and bonds which have been happily existing between our two countries."

The Emperor's letter is a style which varies from the usual style usually used in such documents, and reads as follows: "Zoditu Menelik, Emperor of Ethiopia, King of the Tribe of Judah, and Emperor of the Abyssinian Empire, sends his most respectful greetings to His Majesty, King Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy, and wishes to improve and consolidate the friendly relations and bonds which have been happily existing between our two countries."

Old Time Stuff

An old-time museum, extending over a large area of land, is being planned in the city of New York. The museum will contain a collection of old-time artifacts, including tools, weapons, and other items of historical interest. The museum is expected to be a popular attraction for tourists and residents alike.

Farm Notes

Grading Up the Dairy Herd

Dairy herds of even a scrub quality can in a comparatively few years be built up into good herds by careful selection of the sires used. The Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, at the Nappan, N.S., Experimental Farm began with a group of inferior heifers some years ago which have now been built up into a herd of high producers. The experiment began with poor year-old heifers of nondescript breed, some showed a bit of Shorthorn, a bit of Holstein, and others again traces of Jersey blood. In the building-up process Ayrshire and Shorthorn sires were used successively on the same foundation cows and after the first cross the use of sires of these breeds was continued separately and consistently throughout the succeeding years until the fifth cross had been reached.

The result of this experiment has been brought out in Bulletin No. 126 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, which contains very valuable information for anyone depending on a milking herd for the whole or part of their living. While all animals, good and poor, were retained in the herd, except a few that had to be disposed of on account of injury or disease, it is shown in the Bulletin that after the first cross the percentage of increases in milk and fat production was quite remarkable, amounting in the second cross to 10 per cent, in the fourth cross to 30 per cent, with increases in profits amounting to 22 per cent. In the second, 39 per cent. In the fourth, and 78 per cent. In the fifth cross the usual practice of weeding out the poorer cows has followed, and the increased production in the selected portion of the selected cows over the original dams would have been considerably helped.

Britain to Spend More on Aviation

Civil Aviation to Receive More Attention and Cash Subsidies

London.—The government's expenditure on civil aviation, heretofore for training, development, and subsidizing new commercial airways, will be increased in the Air Ministry's estimates for the forthcoming year. It is announced that an extension in land air line is contemplated, and an agreement has been reached with the Free State Government, a similar service will be opened in the near future. In the negotiations for the inauguration of a regular flying-boat line between Norway and Sweden and other to the north of the Thames or some suitable location on the east coast. It is stated that the Air Ministry intends to develop an extensive scale of high speed, high flying boats, some of which are held down during the winter months.

Food for the North

Thelon Game Sanctuary Now Closed to Natives and Whites

The Thelon game sanctuary, now closed to natives and whites, is a large area of land in the north of Canada. The sanctuary is a game preserve, and it is believed that the closure is necessary to protect the game and the environment. The sanctuary is a game preserve, and it is believed that the closure is necessary to protect the game and the environment.

All Diet on the Western Front

Sylvia Lyon

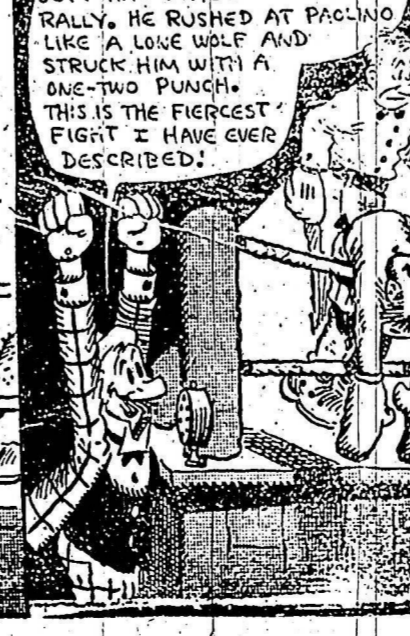

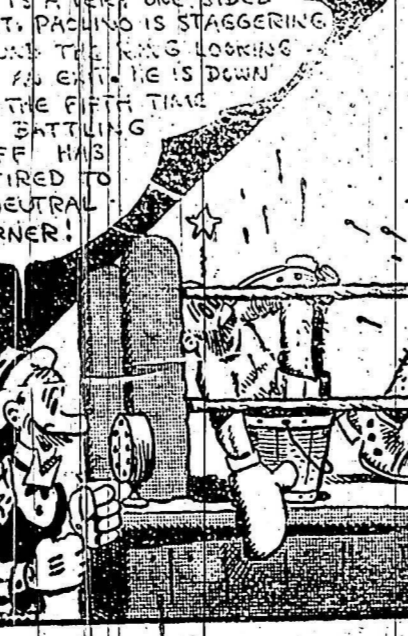

I have been for months and months along by telling the girls and the boys to loosen up, and I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it.

I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it.

I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it.

I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it. I have seen a lot of them do it.

MUTT AND JEFF—By BUD FISHER

Jeff Wins the Air Championship

Jeff has won the air championship, and he is a conquering hero. He has won the air championship, and he is a conquering hero. He has won the air championship, and he is a conquering hero. He has won the air championship, and he is a conquering hero.