His Line Didn't Work Here

Early last week a stranger blew into town with a plausible story to the effect that he was the advance agent for a construction company who were going to begin work on the Meaford-Markdale road. He put up at Mrs. Cutting's boarding house and made arrangements for accomodation for sixteen men who were to be along in a few days. Later in the week Reeve Reburn made enquiries and discovered that the construction company named knew nothing of the advance agent or of the supposed contract. Chief Johnston looked him up and he was later taken in charge by Provincial Constable Dyson. He reports that he ...
