Harry Jobling Finds That Honesty is Still the Best Policy

By A. G. GREENWOOD

Everybody who knows Stacey Park, London's newest suburb, knows the little general shop which old Jobling built out in front of the ancient and ramshackle Manor House.

"At me?" said simply. She nodded. "Because it took a rat to do it!" she said.

Then Mrs. King appeared and said she felt sure Harry must be anxious to get back to his business.

"Well," said Harry, his heart ticking, "more or less."
