British Population Numbers 44,790,485

Increase Lowest Since 1801 but Density is Second in Europe to Belgium

Although the main statistical omts in an analysis of Great Britain's population at 44,750,485, according to the censes just completed, an inter-pretative analysis has been made by S. P. Vivian, the Registrar General S. P. Milan, the Registrar General, serving to modify the discouraging features—the lowest increase since 1801 and the declining birth-rate.

He declares that the fotal is the largest ever recorded in the country. and adds that its density of 685 to the square mile, with the exception of that of Belgium, is the highest of any country in Europe.

Other points in his analysis are: "The numerical increase is less than that of any decennium since 1861 (when the population was but half of its present dimensions) with the sole exception of the war decade, 1911-1921, while the percentage increase, with the same exception, is only half or loss the same exception, is only half or less than half of any previously recorded. But for the exceptional loss of menduring a second partial exception increase would have been the lowest recorded in respect of England troduced in 1801.

"The full significance of the fall (in births 16.3 per cent.) will be but dim-ly appreciated for many years to come; any temporary satisfaction feli in a reduction of the number of unproductive mouths to be filled during the present period of economic stres must sooner or later be qualified by a realization of the profounder secular issues involved. The births of to-day govern the population of the future, and, just as the nation which faced the upheaval of 1914 to 1918 was the product of the birth rates prevailing to ward the close of last century, we are now observing the conditions which will shape the generations charged with the national density in the latter part of the present century.

"The deaths registered in the intercensal period were more than half a million fewer than those of either of the two preceding decennia. This numerical reduction of more than 10 per cent., which, if allowance be made for the increasing age and numbers of the population exposed to risk, repre-sents a reduction in true mortality of more like 20 per cent. compared with the decennium 1911-2- (exclusive of deaths on active service) or 30 per cent. compared with the last pre-war lecennium 1901-11, affords nothing but satisfaction, indicating, 28 it does, a definite advance in the general vitality of the nation as a whole."

The New Education Bertrand Russell in the New States an and Nation (London): (In their chool in Sussex Bertrand Russell and his wife aim to bring up their pupils with a real knowledge of the world, instead of in ignorance of it). In ordinary education the child is brought up to believe, or at least to pretend to believe, that his parents and teachers are impeccable, that his country is always right, that statesmen of his own country and political party are invariably high-minded, that the wicked are easily discerned and invariably defeated in the end, and that only persons of rare depravity such as one is very unlikely to meet would be guilty of any sexual irregularity. Captains of industry, proprietors of great newspapers, admirals, generals, Privy Councillors, and such, are represented as invariably guided by the loftiest public spirit. When the young man goes out into the world and begins to see through all these amiable false hoods, he almost inevitably becomes cynic. Cynicism is the price we pay for a fantastic ethic. Children brought up with a sense of reality will not have to suffer this shock.

Great Lakes Region Has Wide Appeal

Many and Varied Tourist Attractions in Area Bordering on Great Inland Waterway The Great Lakes region of Canada

emodies a truly wide range of scenic and recreational attractions and through its accessibility is one of the nest farered tourist districts of the Dominion. By motor, steamship, and rail this enchanting area may be reached from any of the Caradian pro-vinces and from the United States, Fishing, bunting in season, caroeing, and hathing, as well as such organized sports as goif, and tennis, may be enjoyed under the most ideal conditions. A central highway route traverses the whole of the southern section, afording a splendid motor drive from Montreal, Quebec, to Windsor, Ontario, a distance of rearly 600 miles of smooth travel. This route parallels the St. Lawrence and the shore line of Lake Ontario, and offers splendid views of the river, the Thousand Islands playgrounds, lake vistas, and Side trips can be made from Kings-ton through the Rideau lakes and from Port Hope to the Kawartha Lakes district, two spots rich in cance routes and places to hunt and fish. North from Toronto, Muskoka and Lake of Bays are districts of particular charm. There, nature has designed an out-of-doors particularly qualified to meet all the requirements of a summer vavation. West from Toronto to Wind sor the trail leads through areas of Intense agricultural and floral de velopment, the early history of which is pleasantly associated with coloniza-tion days. East from Hamilton is the Niagara peninsula with its four major claims to distinction—the high de-velopment of fruit culture; the twin cataracts of the Niagara River; the Queenston - Chippewa power development; and the Welland canal. The shore lines of lakes Erie and Huron have many bathing beaches and snug summer colonies which find much fa-or in the eyes of tourists.

The central portion of the Great Lakes district is traversed by both rail and motor highway. Ottawa, the Dominion capital and site of the Parlia. ment Buildings, is the gateway to the Rideau lakes, the fish and game regions of the Gatineau, and the Laure tian hills, a vast playground of river and lake, rolling hills, and green for est. Westward from Ottawa the rail way runs through and the motor route passes close by Algonquin Park, ar extensive provincial reserve rich in fish and wild life, and threaded by innumerable canoe routes. Farther wes lies Mattawa, the starting point of many expeditions into the big game country beyond. North Bay is the meeting point of three roads with out-standing attraction. To the south is the beautiful lake district leading to Georgian Bay and its island paradise; to the north the softwood forests and gold-hearing rocks becken to the ad-venturous; while westward the trail passes through the famous copper and nickel belt and skirts the southern boundary of a district noted for its variety and quality of fish and big

Six Million Diamond Exhibit Shown at Paris Gallery

Paris .- A $6,060,000 diamond exhibit has been dazzling the eyes of Parisians in the Rue de Choiseul at the Galerie Mauboussin. In addition to undreds of stones made up into neckaces, rings and various sorts of de-corations, the exposition included diamonds in the rough and in various stages of cutting for the market.

The most gorgeous piece in the collection was a necklace valued at $50,would partially destroy their brilliancy they were attached with tiny hooks which gripped into equally minute slots in each diamond and held the necklace together.

Another distinguishing mark of the nodels displayed was the stringing to-London Opinion: It is said that the gether of thirty perfectly graduated common fly is capable of traveling 95 canary diamonds by an East Indian miles in a single day. The trouble is, method, that of making platinum joints.

Patience and Humour Exemplified in Spain

There is a delightful old Spanish proverb which it is wise to learn before visiting the country: "Have pa-tience, and the mulberry-leaf will be-come satin."

A tiny story illustrates this admir ably. Going to one of the frontier sta tions for a friend's arrival we saw the notice chalked up that the train was two hours late. After inspecting the church and wandering round the vil-lage in an icy wind for the prescribed two hours we returned to the station to find no sign of any train. The sta-tion-master, who regarded us with a pltying look, was approached. "Was the train then more than two hours late?" "Mesdames, the train is seven hours late," he replied. "But why do you put up the notice that it is two hours late?"

"Ah, that, mesdames-that is to give little hope!" If you have the gift of leisure and of humor, Spain unfolds itself to you as a country of great charm and character, but there must be no question of rushing through it. If you have patience your mulberryleaf will indeed become satin; you will

Character or Color

Natal Advertiser: Lord Willingdon as said that it is character not colo that makes a man. This is the one which counts. If you take your stand on color, then all those qualities which are or may be common to men of diverse races—heroism, virtue, benevolence, sacrifice, self-sacrifice ecome little better than words that mean nothing to those who use them. The vice of the white becomes a greatr thing than the virtue of the brown; and the valour of sacrifice of the vel low becomes a baser thing than the self-sufficiency of the European. But supposing that we forget about the color of a man's skin, and we think only of the virtues of character that are revealed by those who come un-der scrutiny. Are we going to say that the sun which burns a man black also makes his soul black, and the which leaves him a pale skin makes his soul white? We all know that, in the last resort, the worth of a man is determined by the worth of
