Historic Wolfe's Cove Assumes New Aspect

The scene of the landing of General Wolfe, under the towering crags crowned by the Plains of Abraham and the City of Quebec, is about to become the setting for yet another important event in the history of Canada. On September 13, 1759, the British forces disembarked at what is now known as Wolfe's Cove, to capture Quebec. On June 2, 1931, passengers from the new 42,500-ton Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain", on her maiden voyage from Southampton, will land within a few yards of the same spot and be taken by train, through a tunnel slightly over a mile long, under the historic battle-field on which the English hero met his life, direct to the Canadian Pacific's main line to Montreal. This new traffic link, which is being completed by the company at a cost of some $2,000,000, will eliminate the present journey through Quebec's terminals and materially shorten the running time from the ship's side to all important Canadian and American centres. A concrete quay-wall, 4,800 feet in length, with 40 feet of water at low tide, will provide berthing space for the new giants and her sister "White Emperesses", and five railway tracks, converging into one mouth near the wharf and thence turning into the new tunnel, will serve to transfer passengers from the bosom of the St. Lawrence to their respective destinations. Disembarkation will be effected through a two-storey shed, with stairways leading down to the trains. The pictures show: (1) Wolfe's army landing to capture Quebec, (from an old drawing), (2) The tunnel mouth near the river-side, now under construction, (3) General Wolfe.

There are a good many of the subscribers to The Standard who have let their subscriptions become in arrears and the sum of such arrearages makes quite a total. We need the money and would ask all those indebted to us to please make an effort to let us have a remittance at the earliest possible moment. The amount of each individual account when multiplied by four or five hundred means much to us.

Please let us have your little contribution.
