Invents "Talking Clock"

Eugene Esclangon, director of the Eugene Esciangon, director of the Paris Observatory, has invented a talking clock, which it is expected will supply a long-felt want for telegraph and telephone exchanges, government and newspaper offices, where employes are harassed night and day by persons who would learn the time

To such inquirers M. Esclangon's answer. Using a principle employed or to locate serious cases in rural in the talking film, he has produced a robot chronometer which announces the hour, the minute, and the second, by day and by night, every ten sec-

Several of these clocks have been placed on exhibition in the lower rooms of the observatory, and M. Esclangon has distributed a leastet to possible subscribers describing the merits of his instrument.

Now, Parisians desiring to know correct time can get it by calling up a certain number. The answer is M. Esclangon's clocks, installed either a the observatory or at the postoffice.

Solution: At Auction, Y should bid two hearts and, if Z rebids spades, Y should bid two no trump. A suit bid is always preferable to a no trump bid, particularly with a singleton of partner's suit.

At Contract, Y should bid three no trump. The hand is so strong that Z may not have a rebid and yet game is to Y to try for game.

The movement for conservation of vision in Canada is described in the current issue of the Sight-Saving Review, published in New York by the American National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Writing on "What Canada Sees," Miss Mary C. McClelland, of Toronto, who is in charge of prevention of blindness work in the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, says: "It is a complicated problem for a provincial department of health to extend any kind of a regular health service through a province, or any, service at all in some of the outlying districts. Only three of the provinces, British Columbia, Manitoba, and New Brunswiczi, are able to provide a complete yearly medical inspection of all school children; two others manage a complete in spection periodically; the other four can concentrate only on the larger centres, with ocasional excursions into the interior."

The fashion of taking a Spring tonic is based on sound medical grounds. Winter has thinned and devitalized the blood stream so that it isn't carrying enough oxygen.
That is the reason for the listless, languid, easily-tired-out condition so prevalent at this season. What is needed is a tonic-one that will build new blocd and restore and purify the blood stream, and thus enable it to carry the energizing oxygen that quickly revitalizes the whole system. Finding Mineral Deposits

Below Earth's Surface The old saying that "one man can see as far into the earth as another, must be modified for scientists have actually succeeded in getting a good deal of information from the inside without seeing it. During recent years Messrs. A. S. Eve and D. A. Moon and Clouds

One night I came up on deck when the moon had risen an hour, and saw as strange and beautiful a sight as ever made me sigh for the lack as ever made me sign for the most of numbers in my soul. A huge, long, back cloud hung pendent from midway in the sky, with its lower part resting on the sea. It was for all the world of marvels like a great dragon, shaped rudely to a semblance of the beast of the Apocalypse, and with its head lifted into the ether, so that it was framed against the heavens. The moon was in its nouth; the moon shaped like an eye, a brilliant, glowing, wondrous orb, more intensely golden for its contrast with the ominous blackness of the serpentine cloud.

I felt that I had found the origin of the Oriental fable. Some minutes the illusion held, and then the cloud lowered, and the moon, alone against a pale-blue back-ground, the horizon a mass of scudding draperies of pearly hue, lit the ocean between the ship an the edge of the world in a tremulous and mellow glided path.— Only a bird to tell the time is near Frederick O'Brien, in "Mystic Isles of the South Seas."
