SOMETHING DIFFERENT

Our Confederation was founded upon certain clearly defined principles, fundamentally and essentially British, and as such it must remain if we as Canadians intend to stand true, not only to these principles but to the men, who in framing our constitution intended that we should. The Fathers of Confederation relied on future generations to not only live up to the simple codes as written therein, but expected that as true Canadians we would go farther than looking to the very letter of the constitution in building up a future for our children and children's children for generations to follow. The very broad and fair-minded way in which it was drawn is enough in itself to let us know that it was truly and impartially intended to emulate that world renowned adage: "British fair play." We who were born and have lived under the British flag are, I am afraid, sometimes inclined to forget that there are a lot of others in the world not so fortunately situated, in other words we are more or less "spoiled." Should it happen to be our misfortune to have to live in some of the countries of the world to-day where revolution and bloodshed is rife, and where freedom such as we enjoy was never known, that I think we would come home, if possible, and the true meaning of British fair play would be engraved in our memories in its true light for the remainder of our days. Let us be careful about paying too much heed to those who come from such countries, and to those of our own country who advocate with them the "scrapping" of our very constitution. They, of course, vehemently deny that they intend doing any such thing, yet in the same breath they declare that our system of government is wrong and at all events has outlived its usefulness. Then we say that if our system of government is wrong our constitution must be wrong. The constitution which was founded at Confederation and by which our system of government has ever since been carried on cannot be altered without endangering the very foundation on which our Confederation stands. Regarding the substitute we are at sea. Of one thing we are certain: it would be different. That is about all we can safely say about it. Then let us weigh each carefully. One that has stood the test of time, through fair weather and foul, prosperity and adversity, peace and war, and still remains a system, though not faultless, yet one which has been proven by experience second to none the world over. The alternative: a vague and, shall we call it something radical, something different: one, to say the least, which is bound to interfere not only with our constitution but with those Anglo-Saxon traditions which we have so loyal, and carefully maintained and on which for generations we have so successfully relied.

LIFE'S VISION

(By Wilma J. March)
Summer's resplendent beauty
Is hid from our view at last;
The myriad colors of Autumn
'Neath blankets of snow are cast.
Thus did God in His wisdom,
Renew the vision of man,
Each in His rightful Kingdom
According to His great plan.
The Master knew we were human,
Subject to change and decay;
He thought of a way to illumine
This life with a versatile ray.
And so, as the years we span,
A seasonal change doth come
Enlightening new hope for the fears
Of animal, bird and man.

VANDELEUR

(Intended for last week.)
The Young People's meeting on Tuesday evening of last week was well attended. An interesting program was provided. The president, Mr. H. Thompson, presided and Miss Colleen Hutchinson read the Scripture. The literary convener, Mrs. Will Hutchinson, had charge of the topic and gave an interesting discourse on the subject, "Music," based on the songs of David. Miss Mae Graham gave a short outline of the life of Geo. W. Johnson and of the old familiar song which he composed, "When You and I were Young Maggie." The heroine of the song was his wife, formerly Maggie Clark, and the scene was the 20-mile creek in Wentworth County near Hamilton, where both he and Mrs. Johnson were born about the year 1879. The ruins of the creek-land mill can still be seen. Mr. Geo. Buchanan and Ken Teeter had charge of the recreational period.
A large number of friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Genoe (who were recently married) met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Magee on Friday evening of last week and spent a few enjoyable hours. During the course of the evening the bride and groom were called to the centre of the room and Mrs. Jim Cargo read an address and on behalf of the community presented the young couple with a handsome wicker chair and a chesterfield table. Norman made a suitable reply and all sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows." Lunch was served by the ladies.
