PRESENTATION

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Macaulay was besieged by friends and neighbors numbering about one hundred on Friday evening last when a miscellaneous shower was held in honor of the recent bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Rodgers. The evening was spent in cards and dancing and at midnight the bride and groom were asked to take the chairs of honor, when the following address was read by Miss Jessie Winterburn and a pretty decorated basket laden with gifts was carried in and presented to the bride and groom.

Markdale, Jan. 5, 1934

Dear Bill and Marg—We, your friends and neighbors, having heard of the recent plunge you have taken into the mysterious sea called matrimony have called this evening to give some sage advice, which of course will not be followed, but by giving the gift will relieve our minds and ease our conscience.

Marg, a good many husbands are utterly spoiled by mismanagement. Some people proceed as if their cord called comfort, as the one called them up. Others keep them constantly in hot water. Others let them freeze by their carelessness and indifference. Some keep them in a stew by their irritating ways, and we anxiously as some husbands do, keep them in a pickle all their lives. It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good if managed in this way. But if properly treated even a 4th line boy may become really devoted.

The following is a tested recipe for cooking husbands: A preserving kettle of finest porcelain is best but if you have nothing but an earthenware pipkin it will do with care. See that the linnen you wrap him in is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons and strings tightly sewed on. Tie him in a kettle by a strong alk called comfort, as the one called them up. It is apt to be weak. Make a clear, steady fire out of love, neatness and cheerfulness. Set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he splutters and flukes do not be anxious as some husbands do, but until they are nearly done. Add a little sugar in the form of what confectioners call kisses, but no vinegar, nor pepper, on any account. A little spice improves him but it must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instruments into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently and you cannot fail to know when he is done. If thus treated you will find him very talkative, agreeing nicely with you and he will keep as long as you want him unless you become careless and set him in too cool a place. In case you decide to try our recipe and should find it difficult to procure the necessary equipment we brought with us some articles which we hope
