TEA TIME TALK

(BY WILMA J. MARCH)

From the land of sunshine and flowers to acres brown and trees quite bare, is a far cry. It was spring in all its beauty throughout the Southern States. One experiences a strange solemn feeling as they cross the Suwannee River in Northern Florida. It seems that one should pause and listen for the soft strains of that old song. A row of turtles sleeping on a log in the sun—a bass jumping for a fly—the winding stream outlined by willows, hung with silvery moss—these paint a picture on memory's screen which will long remain.

At Quitman, Ga., streets flanked with crimson roses greeted our view. The boulevard for many blocks was aglow with the radiant colors of spring flowers. This beauty is one of the most fruitful advertisements a town can have. The red clay of Georgia gives a very picturesque background, against which the green foliage lends a softening effect. This clay is used for the driveways and paths in the vicinity of the Singing Tower at Lake Wales.

The hillsides in Tennessee and Kentucky were pink and white with dogwood and mountain laurel. Lilacs and pussy-willows, robins and circus trains gave evidence that spring was in the air. Mornings were cool, making the spring sunshine all the more welcome. In the extreme south this season creeps in so gently that one scarcely realizes it is there. Thus its entry is not appreciated so greatly as in the Northern climate.

Speaking of Tennessee, the government has placed an order with the Detroit company for 10,000 Keltivators for use under the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Above the entrance to the low college at the University of Kentucky a wise robin built a nest. The students posted a notice in legal form warning everyone against disturbing the nest or the contents of same, or in any way molesting the robin family, under penalty of prosecution. Although the nest is in each reach, no one has bothered it. Too bad cats can't read.

The grass in the bluegrass district of Kentucky is always green. At least that much of spring is ever with them. We were crossing the toll bridge at Burnside, Kentucky, when a little bare-footed, touzle-headed boy ran to the centre of the roadway, waving his hands high in the air. Naturally we came to a stop, inquiring the reason for such
