TEA TIME TALK

(BY WILMA J. MARCH)

It is the time of rugby, hunting, shooting-matches, initiations and falling leaves. It may be "the saddest days of all the year" but how lovely they are! Some mighty fine and exciting rugby has been played. The world series has once more been decided, with a triumph for the Cardinals. Detroit worked hard but again the coveted prize slipped through her fingers. "Schoolboy Rowe" was married the following day. Judge Landis has gone fishing, after showing his importance. Dizzy and Daffy Dean are still hurling the ball but have drifted southward. It was a lucky break for the Cards, when these brothers stepped out of vaudeville and into baseball. It was a lucky day for them too. Mr. Braden is financial owner of the team. Branch Rickey is vice-president and buys and sells the players. Sometimes a sum in six figures is decided without a moment's hesitation, delay meaning the loss of a valuable player. Many an amateur player is bought for a small sum and trained, then sold to great advantage. This is one of the ways in which the huge salaries paid to stars are raised. The Cardinals own about eight minor teams. Wanser Rickey is scout and finds his players for the major team, amongst the best of the world series teams train in Florida, going south the first of February. The Boston Braves go to St. Pete, the Brooklyn Dodgers to Orlando, the Cincinnati Reds to Tampa, the New York Giants to Miami Beach, the Philadelphia Phillies to Winter Haven and the St. Louis Cardinals to Bradenton. Thus the tourists in the south, have the privilege of seeing many fine games, throughout the winter season.

Branch Rickey has had a colorful career beginning his sport life as catcher for a thirteen dollar team at the age of thirteen. He attended Ohio Wesleyan College at Delaware and after graduation went to Meadville College in Penna. as a teacher and coach for the football and baseball teams. Later he was called back to his former school in the same capacity. He worked his way through college by waiting on tables and attending to furnaces. At one time he joined a Dallas, Texas team with the understanding that he play six days a week only. A very important game was scheduled and they offered him fifty dollars to catch for them. He needed the money very badly but refused the offer as he had promised his mother that he would play no games on Sunday. That promise has been kept to this day. Playing with the Reds, he lost his job for the reason, but he was drafted to Philadelphia and while there, was considered one of the best catchers in the country. Chicago bought him but he unfortunately tore a ligament in his arm and did not play for a long time. We next see him at Ann Arbor where he took a law course, graduated with high honors. He practiced law in Boise City, Idaho. Shortly afterwards he learned he was suffering with tubercular trouble and went to a mountain resort in New York. Here he remained till cured. Returning he became connected with the St. Louis Browns as manager. The Cardinals were nearly down and out, not able to buy suits for their men. Branch, later joined their forces and built up the team from a valuation of $250,000, to a club worth millions. Gradually he took more responsibility until the financial management was placed in his hands. Added to this, he is now vice president. A great deal of the success of the Cards is due to the Rickey brothers.

Orilla has captured the Canadian lacrosse championship after a fine display of speed and precision. Ike Boone, a relative of the famous Daniel Boone, of southern distinction, brought much success to the Maple Leafs. And with the cool days not far away skates will be sharpened in readiness for the open sheet.

Shooting matches are the order of the day. Many fine birds have lost their heads and they were not Cardinals either. College towns are gay with queer apparitions appearing on the streets and in every public place. Many a freshman will be glad when his term of torture is over, yet there's a thrill in it too. Every rank and stunt helps to make college days memorable ones. The old heathenish methods of torture, to test the sportsmanship of the fresh, have become ancient history. It was high time it did, but campus days would not be so colorful were all initiations stopped. Imaginations work overtime concocting medicines just bitter enough to bring forth a set jaw. Our superficial grin, with the appearance of being genuine. It has its benefits and character building qualities, acting like a mortar holding together the foundation, without which the structure would be insecure. Perhaps no year in college is so important as the first one. It is the beginning of the end, the entrance to the Hall of Fame. On the stage of life, as on the legitimate stage, the importance of entry is on a par with or above that of exit. The student who is a good allround sport has a pass to popularity. The sportsman of the school of learning and a life membership on the road to success. Always he honors and respects his body, it being his temple of life. The cooperation our teachers give to their students on the field and in the gymnasium proves that physical education will, the value of the training physically, intellectually, and spiritually. Spiritually? Certainly. Many lessons are learned on the playground. It is well that a cheat in sport is labelled as he or she is. Only a game? Yes—but on the other, cheats in a little game is very likely to cheat also, in something greater. Our school field day has a mammoth importance and it is very evident by the contestants and their winnings, the cooperation and inspiration they receive at home. Our national athletes are fine men and women as any nation on earth can boast of. It is not over-stressing the physical but it is linking up the body and intellect to work together, in a fine moral manner. Anything as universal and long-standing as sport, must have a real value in life.

Approximately 1900 years ago Ben Hur was sentenced to the life of a galley-slave by the Romans; he clung to the hope of rescue or survival, through adapting himself to the strain. He shrewdly realized that by changing his position, he would be better able to stand the agonies of the weary hours. The result was that he developed into the best oarsman in Rome. Later during his travels in Antioch, he volunteered to drive the chariot for the Arab, Hiderim. A test proved his most grateful. We all know the result of that race.

The Empire and Olympic games have a great power of attraction and they inspire our youth to finer achievements. Just who founded the latter or when they were begun, we do not know, but there is a list of winners back to 776 B.C. and ending 294 A.D., a period of 1170 years. The games were held every four years at Olympia on the banks of the river Alpheus. The Greeks considered the games so important, that a sacred truce was declared, if any states were at war. The prizes were crowns of wild olive from the sacred tree.

It is autumn once more, in all her matchless beauty. It is not death but periodic sleep, from which comes a new life. Thus the bareness of the trees means only rest, the blanket of white over a frozen world is assurance of substantial moisture the following year, likewise we should strive for a serene and mellow outlook on life. For therein lies peace.

Dear Eveline and Laurie,—Having heard that you have decided to enter upon a new sphere of life, we thought it a fitting occasion to come and spend a social evening with you and to express our good wishes for your future happiness.

We felt, Eveline, that Cherry Grove, where we have always found you willing to take part in all activities, could not let you start in your new home without some remembrance of us. Laurie, though more of a stranger to us, we have enjoyed your acquaintance and hope that we may become greater friends.

It's sweeping and dusting and cooking.

It's making the wee house bright for the man all day, who is earning his pay.

And hastening home at night. He for the toil and wages: She for the saving up; And both in all weather to stand together.

And share the loaf and the cup. Please accept these gifts with the very best wishes of your friends at Cherry Grove, and community.

Signed on behalf of your friends, Eida Ward, Elva Smart, and to express our good wishes for your future happiness.
