Synopsis of Previous Chapters

The principal character in the story is Kelly, the son of Sir Miles Pencarrow, a lawyer whose father and mother emigrated to New Zealand and brought up a family who are now the parents of the young people with whom the story is concerned.

Sir Miles Pencarrow wished Kelly to become a lawyer and to enter his father's practice. Kelly insists on becoming a farmer. He joins an uncle, Michael Pencarrow, who owns Duffield farm.

His uncle has a daughter, Ella, who falls in love with an Englishman named Henry. Ella's father offers Henry a half-share in the Duffield Farm.

Kelly infuriates Kelly Pencarrow by quarrelling with Henry, assaults him and leaves Duffield to work elsewhere.

Kelly received a summons to the local court to appear in court.

Arrived at the bedside, he is asked if he will apologise to Henry and thus give her the assurance that the family is a hope of reconciliation.

By the will, Kelly inherits two thousand pounds and purchases some land near Tadoussac.

In his second season he invites his sister, Genevieve, his sister-in-law, Fanny, and his cousins, Robin, Herrick and Jessie Macdonald to come to Tadoussac. While they are with him, Kelly starts a bush fire which causes operations.

The fire, aided by winds, gets out of control.

The young Pencarrows are rescued and return to the home of Sir Miles, bringing with them a baby whose parents have been killed, and Kelly's stout-hearted assistant, Totty Barker.

As her vivid fancy chased sudden hopes and prospects, the magic of their inspiration played upon her face, which responded to every motion. Like one who draws the blind, she leaves the door ajar, Genevieve's face revealed to Robin, lying lazily at her feet, the setting press of ideas that tumbled about behind the closed eyes. Some were too fantastic even to find words to clothe them, but, like a secret indulgence, she dallied with them a while before tossing them away.

"What's it all about?" asked Robin. He touched her face with a blade of grass, and she opened her eyes.

"What's what?"

"That's sounds like your father," he said. "What were you thinking about? I'm jealous you didn't share it with me."

"Everything: life, the future, and what a girl can do beside watering the maidenhair fern."

"Swollen with ambition?" he said. "Swollen fit to burst, if you want to know."

"I do; tell me."

Try Different Dishes to Delight Your Family

Don't Get Into a Rut and Serve the Same Things Over and Over Again

A crusade we would like to lead is one to get Canadian housewives into the habit of daring to try new recipes and new food materials, too. The only reason we are not known as the best cooks in the world is that we do not make complete use of the superb natural resources we have. The best raw food products on earth are found right here. When foreign chefs come to visit, they almost go out of their senses with ecstasy over our markets which offer the best of every land besides native foods, unknown elsewhere.

The trouble with the average Canadian cook is that she allows her family to get into ruts. Certain dishes become pets and are served over and over again, done the same way. I should like to see every one of us take pride in the number of different ways we can prepare even the most ordinary foods.

And apropos of that, we want to insert just here a recipe for chicken pot pie that will do things you never dreamed could be done to that old favorite chicken.

CHICKEN POT PIE.

Take the flower, and turn the hour, and kiss your love again.

They were startled from their happy dreaming by Kitty's voice calling urgently from the verandah. It had a wild, tragic note.

"Robin! Robin! Come quickly." Matthew Pencarrow was dead.

CHAPTER NINE.

Robin stayed with his mother, and a neighbor drove Genevieve hurriedly to town. Kitty was anxious for Miles to come out.

Genevieve walked into her father's study, the morning's scene completely forgotten in this sudden tragedy.

"Father—," she began, but his angry broke in.

"Go to your room, I'll speak to you later. How dare you disobey me?" She raised her hand in a protesting gesture, as though to wave aside a futile quarrel.

"Grandfather is dead," she said gently.

"What?"

Genevieve nodded, and forced back the tears.

"It was quite sudden, this afternoon. His heart, the doctor said."

"My God! This is terrible!"

"We sat with him for a while before dinner, and he was in pain then, but he seemed glad to see us. You never forget me, Genevieve," he said. "I didn't see him again."

"Quick, call your mother. We must go out at once."

Matthew Pencarrow had been conquered in spirit by physical pain. For years his movements had been hampered and his big frame twisted and cramped by rheumatism. Long after he had surrendered his authority, Bessie's indomitable spirit had held sway. Matthew had lost touch; even the home farm, now capably managed by an experienced farmer had ceased to interest him greatly.

Kitty—the gay Kitty Pencarrow—the delight of his eyes, who had been more concerned with putting frills and flounces on her gown than rearing chickens—she had been his greatest comfort in these last sad years. She would sit and read to him, and hold the knotted old hand in hers, and turn the pillow and bring what soothing joy was possible into his declining days. She alone had been with him when the last seizure had caught him up in a crushing embrace. Her arms were round him, her kiss was on his forehead. All the love and gratitude of a stricken old man for his best-loved child were in the eyes that closed forever.

With the passing of Matthew Pencarrow an epoch ended. He had outlived many of his contemporaries, and the younger generation had taken control of the land which he and his kind had won for civilization.

FRENCH FRIED FOODS

Fritters, croquettes, French fried vegetables and such economical dishes as fish cutlets are appetizing for late summer menus and are possible only with deep-fat frying. This method of cookery is a short-process too.

All families are obliging and interested in something new. If the novelty doesn't prove popular you don't have to repeat it.

AND VARY THE SHAPES.

Use numerous food combinations and vary the shape of certain dishes. For example, a jellied vegetable salad served in a ring mold with the centre filled with fresh tomatoes cut in quarters and garnished with mayonnaise seems quite different from the same jelly in individual molds on a slice of tomato.

Italy's Marriageable Women Deprived Of Their Positions

Mussolini Determined to Boost Country's Birthrate, Tries to Promote More Weddings.

Rome.—Italy ought to have more babies, Benito Mussolini believes, so he has set out to deprive all marriageable maids of their jobs.

The result, Il Duce himself has predicted, will be that they'll have to find themselves husbands.

Mussolini, determined to boost Italy's birth rate, took another step calculated to promote weddings.

Henceforth, every single man who tries to get work with the Government will have to prove his intentions to be married, and private industry will be requested to set up similar requirements. The Premier already has ousted numbers of mayors and other public officials because they were bachelors, and gave no indications that they were preparing to become benefactors.

Furthermore, the Fascist drive to eliminate from commerce and industry the thousands of single girls who do not support families will make jobs for men, the Premier holds.

Every male taken from the ranks of Italy's unemployed becomes forthwith a potential husband and father, Il Duce maintains.

Mussolini's first steps in the campaign to get women out of the factories into the kitchens took these forms:

The Government issued definite orders that the number of women admitted to examination for public and semi-public office be sharply reduced.

The Fascist textile organization ordered that 30 per cent. of all workers in the weaving branch of the industry should be men, "to meet the demand of male employment." Women now form an estimated 90 per cent. of the total number of textile employees.

Plans were reported being prepared to extend the percentage system to other industries.

The export institute ordered all women clerks out and hired young men as clerks and stenographers.

"I do not think that it would be impossible to find a woman who could be President, but I hope that it doesn't happen in the near future."—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Autumn Shades Lead List of Winter Colors

Turn your eye toward the trees and watch the leaves as they begin to turn and fall, if you would know the colors of your winter wardrobe.

As the days pass the shades of brown and green, yellow and red will deepen into the rich natural tones of bark and leaf and ground. This leaf idea belongs rightfully to Lesur, of Paris, who has been making a careful study of forests and these basic colors he weaves into colours for your wardrobe.

The only colors he wears into these basic browns and greens and yellows are deep forest shadows of violet, gray and glaucous red. He also makes wools with metal "Luizan"—which has a twist of wool on a metal warp lacquered and forming lustrous of glow-worms and a thicker fabric with a mossy surface called "Stracklack."

His lace wools feature square meshes covered with designs of many colored embroidery twisted yarn, etc.

"Elli" has spots of a darker shade superimposed to form an eclipse, and is used for dresses; "Arou" is a very grainy lace, soft as satin with lustrous of red rabbit hairs sprinkled through it.

Variety in these lace wools seems limitless.

ing, and that he likes to "rule". But he must understand that he cannot rule the lives of his children for ever. And, judging, by your daughter's handwriting, she is well able to look after herself.

Mrs. "Woeful", London—The your troubles, and not only that, but in to your worries too easily. You should be cultivating outside interests, providing as much variety for yourself as is possible. To nurse your troubles, and not only that, but to imagine worries that are non-existent, is merely to create a neurotic condition, and, after all, it is so needless. Take hold of yourself and shake off these nervous colicews that are gradually encircling your mind. I have written you, suggesting a regimen for you to follow.

Miss E., Toronto—You are at an age when you are inclined to exaggerate these lovers' tiffs. As it is hard to feel complacent when things go wrong in one's love affairs, but time will show that you had nothing to fear, because I am convinced that the young man was sincere when he told you that he loved you, and before long, things will turn out alright again. In any case, you are rather young to feel that your life is blighted, whatever the outcome.

shopping expeditions may soon be abandoned in favor of an arm-chair telephone, and a radio at home.

For the possibilities of shopping by television were recently demonstrated to members of the press here at a private exhibition of latest advanced television methods. The receiving set showed a mannequin displaying hats and a man giving a few "pointers" on scarfs and furnishing materials. Prices and details were communicated by telephone.

This demonstration has been merely one of many indications that it will not be long before the dream of the "family" television set can be turned into a reality. Sir Harry Greer chairman of the Baird Television Company, recently addressed his shareholders from a distance of 10 miles, by television, to show them that "almost unbelievable" advances had been made.

Meanwhile the British Broadcasting Corporation is said to be turning its thoughts toward producing television programs on a large scale. Recently it has tested several devices with a view, it is said, to contracting for supplies in the near future.

Color is lent to these reports by the persistent rumors in the entertainment world that one of Britain's large radio, gramophone, and disc machine combines is prepared to put television sets on the market for no more than the cost of an ordinary radio-gramophone just as soon as the British Broadcasting Corporation has reached a definite decision.

Girl's Plan Accepted For Bridge Across The Missouri River

Minneapolis.—A 21-year-old University of Minnesota co-ed, who will not receive her degree in the engineering school until next June, was disclosed as the designer of the plan accepted for the new $2,075,000 bridge to be constructed across the Missouri River at Omaha, Neb.

She is Edith Reed of Minneapolis, who is working her own way through the university, and who developed the plan while in bed recuperating from an automobile accident.

Many leading architects expressed amazement when it was learned the successful design was the creation of a woman. The structure will be 6,200 feet long.

Only Woman Deputy Police Head Resigns Position in New York

New York.—Miss Henrietta Addition, the only woman ever to hold a deputy police commissioner's position in New York, is now out as head of the crime prevention bureau of the police department, her resignation having been accepted by Mr. Lewis J. Valentine, commissioner.

Simultaneously, Mr. Valentine announced that the crime prevention bureau would be reorganized, but he declined to give any plans and specifications on what would be done, and likewise, he refused to say who would be named as Miss Addition's successor. For the time being, he indicated, the work will be under Inspector Louis S. Costuma, chief of the bureau's uniformed forces.

Neither Miss Addition nor the Commissioner would say why Miss Addition had resigned. She was appointed to the directorship of the bureau and as sixth deputy police commissioner on October 11th, 1930, succeeding Miss Virginia Murray. At the time of taking up this position she had served for a long time as a social worker and was active in the affairs of the women's city club and the New York League of Women Voters.

Prof. Roy V. Peel, chairman of the City Fusion Party expressed regret that Miss Addition was allowed to resign and urged the Fiorello H. LaGuardia Fusion Mayorality to reappoint her, although she was a Tammany appointee.

ASHLEY-FAIRBANKS Case Undefended

London.—The Ashley divorce case in which Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., has been named co-respondent, will be heard about December 1st by a special jury.

It was understood there will be no defence, which is expected to speed the case through the court. No damages will be sought but the costs are expected to total about $10,000 because of extensive preliminary work.

Lord Ashley's Counsel denied reports of moves to attach Fairbank's property here.

Lady Ashley, who recently returned from the French Riviera has attended West End social events recently in company with Sir Robert Throckmorton, wealthy 26 year old Warwickshire landowner.
