FARM-CAMP FOR TRANSIENT MEN

Plan to Rehabilitate 1200 in Pennsylvania Includes Raising Own Food

Pittsburg.—Taking its own advice to go back to the farm, the Federal Government has established what is believed to be the first farmcamp for homeless transient men on a 235-acre tract of land near Valencia. By encouraging them to provide own food and shelter, the Government hopes to rehabilitate 1,200 "wanderers of the depression" for useful work in society with the return of better times.

This is the first of three farm-camps which will be established in the Pittsburgh district before Christmas, designed to enroll approximately 400 homeless men each and to supplement all other undertakings of the Federal Transient Bureau in this area, according to Mr. G. L. Townsend, state director of rehabilitation.

The Valencia camp has just been moved from Allegheny County's South Park, where 225 transients have been living and working since last March. Explaining the move, Mr. Townsend said they were convinced by the experience of an unemployed farm at Hammarville that the men acquire a new and brighter attitude when they realize they are actually raising their own food and building a roof over their heads.

DEFINITE OBJECTIVE FOUND

"Work about the country park was useful, but did not show anything concrete when completed," he added. "These men are sensitive about the thought of charity, and farming seems to be the best way of removing that belief."

Federal relief heads in Washington are closely studying the new farm experiment as a possible solution to the transient problem. Mr. Townsend said, and may establish similar camps in other sections.

By spring the Valencia project will be a communal village, equipped with several barracks, a large mess hall, recreation centre, blacksmith shop, wood-working plant and a general farming business, but for the present the men are living in army tents awaiting a shipment of lumber to begin their construction program.

LIVESTOCK ALREADY ON "FARM"

Already the farm has 60 head of cattle assigned from the Government's purchases of cattle in drought-stricken areas, 200 hogs and 600 chickens. There are 300 barrels of kraut, 100 barrels of beans and several hundred barrels of other vegetables in the camp's larder.

When the crops have been harvested next year, the camp will have produced much more than enough food for its own needs and will distribute the surplus to other relief agencies, Mr. Townsend said.

When the day's work is finished, the instruction will be given the men in various trades and studies in cooperation with the Federal Emergency Education Relief Administration.

"I am convinced that it will be on a self-supporting basis by next year, and the men can rightfully feel that they have earned their weekly money grants of from $1 to $3 in addition to their maintenance," Mr. Townsend said. "I believe this is the best way to meet this particular problem, both for the physical well-being of the men and their mental development."

CENSUS TAKING

Full of Perils and Adventures Up North

Ottawa.—Census taking in most countries is a matter of routine, but in Canada it is always a complicated problem—sometimes a perilous adventure.

Beyond the comparatively narrow ribbon of town and farm there is a vast hinterland of bush and barren lake and mountain and sea coasts where the inhabitants are few and widely scattered and yet must be included in the "population". Here the official census taker is helpless and the Federal Government must call to its aid not only its own Royal Canadian Mounted Police and agents of the Department of Indian Affairs, but fur-trading companies and church missions in the Far North.

The time and patience required to collect such data in far corners is seen in the fact that although 1931 was the last census year, the information is still incomplete and reports are still trickling in.

The latest report, received by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics from Moose Factory, tells a thrilling story. It was written by the Rev. J. Emile Salmond, a missionary, who was engaged to take the census along the eastern shore of James Bay.

"I must say," he writes "that the canoe trip gave me a good deal of worry as I had never made that trip in such an unsafe means of conveyance."

"The run is 600 miles along the shore, which means a battle with the elements: rain, snow, winds, ice and heavy fogs. Furthermore, we have to cross three bad spots, namely, Hannah Bay, Rupert's House Bay and Cape Hope Bay—all wide and deep. Everything is done in good weather, but when it is stormy the trip is very dangerous. Only once did we find ourselves in a storm of that kind; it was in Hannah Bay. It looked as if the sea was going to swallow us. The canoe would be riding on the crest of the waves, and a moment later plunging into the trough. My guide gave proofs of his marvelous skill in dodging and cutting through the waves. Our canoe had air-tight compartments; it measured 20 feet in length and was covered with a very strong waterproof fabric. I carried two outboard motors in case one should fail."

Old and New Inquiry Heads

From the cheerful look on the face of Hon. H. H. Stevens and the serious mien of Major W. W. Kennedy, K.C., M.P., one would be entitled to think that perhaps it is not all "beer and skittles" being chairman of the Royal Commission of Price Spreads. This picture was taken in Ottawa when Major Kennedy took over the chairmanship relinquished by Mr. Stevens on Friday, October 27, when he resigned from that post and also from the Bennett Government.

(Editor's Note: To know yourself is to understand, and understanding will enable you to make the most of your latent talents and characteristics. The author of these interesting articles makes an offer to you. Read this article and see how he can help you.)

Here is another letter this time it is from a lady reader who lives in the West. It is similar to many that I receive each week, and shows the varied problems that beset so many people.

"I have been going with a gentleman friend for some time, and we are devoted to each other. When we started getting to like each other, my friend told me that we could not get married for some time, because he was living with his mother, who is over 90 years of age, and he could not ask me to go and live with her. He has to look after her, and she is his sole support. She is helpless and can do nothing for herself. She rarely knows any of us, and is really merely existing. I feel terribly sorry for her, but it does complicate things for both of us.

"I agreed to wait, but time is going on and we seem no nearer marriage. We are both terribly anxious to get married, but my fiancé says we simply cannot as things are. He is getting discouraged, and thinks he is bothering me coming around without having anything definite to offer me for goodness knows when—for he will not marry as long as his mother lives. Neither of us like a long courtship, and he does not like the idea of keeping me on a string, as he says in this way. Can you help us, Mr. St. Clair? We are both in our early forties. I don't know just how you can help, but maybe you can make some suggestion, or offer some advice, that will make the situation more bearable for both of us."

This is, without a doubt an unfortunate position for any couple to be placed in. Time is passing you both by, and you are missing the golden years of companionship that should be yours.

I have studied the writing of both of you, and find that you are both very ardent, affectionate people. Neither of you is of the cool, dispassionate type, who can control your feelings for a long time.

Your fiancé's mother is very old, but she may linger on for years yet, in which case the situation would become unbearable for you. Then there is the matter of children. The older you get, the more difficult will become your position, from several angles.

I understand that it is not a question of your fiancé's mother being hostile to you, or laying down the law about having a daughter-in-law living with her. It seems to be merely a question of your fiancé's attitude that provides the obstacle.

I am going to be quite frank, because that is what you want. You must put it up to your fiancé that the situation cannot go on for any length of time. Tell him that you much prefer to marry him, and live with his mother whilst she is alive. This is something which you will have to put up with but if you are prepared to do that, and apparently you are then it is better that you get married. When his mother dies you have your own home.

But it is not practical to keep apart for a practically unlimited time. You are both human, and a situation may possibly arise which would leave you, as the woman, in a disadvantageous position. You will understand that I mean without my going into further detail, I am writing you at greater length direct.

Have YOU a problem in which Mr. St. Clair can help you? Handwriting tells the story of people accurately, scientifically and without any frills. Do you wish to know what your friends are really like? ## 12 Miles Up

Earth Looks Like A Warped Checkboard Says Photographer

WASHINGTON.—The rarest of photographs—a picture that looks something like an old warped checkerboard—has just been developed at the National Geographic Society.

It is a bit of earth, as photographed from the record height of almost 12 miles. It was snapped 61,800 feet above the ground by Capt. Albert W. Stevens during the ill-fated stratospheric flight of the National Geographic-Army Air Corps balloon Explorer.

The picture shows a section of Nebraska about 10 miles square, over which the balloon was soaring when the bag ripped and started the fast descent that forced Captain Stevens and Major Kepner to jump.

Small hills and ridges appear like ripples on the surface of a pool or like an astronomer's photograph of the moon, edges of the picture are fogged because the film was partially exposed to light when the gondola crashed.

This photograph and others taken at lower levels, should help natural scientists make a more accurate adjustment of barographs, instruments that measure altitude.

By comparing the length of an object in the picture with its actual length. The exact height of the balloon can be figured. The focal length, or distance from focus to lens of the camera, also enters this calculation.

English Newspaper Serves All Balkans

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia.—The Balkan Herald, first newspaper in English to cover all the Balkan countries, opened publication here recently. A. Terence Atherton, proprietor of the South Slav Herald which he founded three years ago, is editor and founder of the new paper.

The aim of the Balkan Herald is given as "to promote not merely inter-Balkan co-operation, but even more importantly an understanding of the Balkans and the Balkan problems amongst the English-speaking peoples of Britain and America."

Contributors to the first issue included Prof. Gilbert Murray, Lord Riddell, J. I. Garvin, Admiral Mark Kerr, H. W. Nevins, Robert Byron and Brig. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill.

Morse Code Goes In Old London

Machines Have Completely Ousted Dot-and-Dash Telegraph System.

London—"Dot-and-dash" for London's telegrams are dead—aged 70 years.

This means London's last Morse telegram has been despatched from the Central Telegraph Office, and in future all telegrams will be sent by automatic teleprinter machines. The occasion of the passing away of the old Morse system was marked by a city business man handing in a telegram in the morning, an ordinary domestic message to a Sidcup address.

It was an ordinary telegram message, but it made history. It was the last one Morsed out of London. Very soon the last Morse key—or "tapper"—will be disconnected. For 70 years it has held sway.

USED EXTENSIVELY. Now it has gone — and with it "Old Bob" (Robert Stiles), the oldest "tapper" in the Post Office, who has retired after 42 years as a "dot-and-dash" operator.

The new teleprinter machines can send 100 wires of average length an hour — more than double the capacity of the old Morse instruments. An operator can be trained in six months to send 80 telegrams an hour.

The teleprinter machines are used extensively in the telegraph systems of Canada and other British Dominions.

Mail Rocketed Ship to Shore

Tryout Near Calcutta Proves Successful—Service May Be Installed

Calcutta, India. — Ship-to-shore rocket mail delivery was tested successfully today in the estuary of the Hooghly River near Calcutta.

A small steamship rocketed mail 1,000 yards, obviating the necessity for a landing in the dangerous shoal infested waters.

Post Office and military authorities conducted the test. Post Office officials hoped for a quicker and cheaper mail delivery by use of the rocket, particularly in some areas where mail steamers lose days because of winding rivers.

Military authorities were interested because of the possibility of using

World's 'Oldest Flea' Rouses Staid Times

LONDON.—An editorial in the usually staid Times reveals that the "oldest flea" recently was unearthed in East Prussia.

The petrified granddaddy of all fleas is said to be 5,000,000 years old, the Times said, and asks: "What heights of experience and cunning would he not have scaled by now? If he could speak, it is certain he would pour conventional scorn on the pampered lives of his descendants, contrasting them with his ramifications into the woolly hides of mammoths, and the impenetrable thicknesses of the skins of brontosaurus or plesiosaurs.

"Such soft garments and softer flesh were not revealed by heaven to him."
