Either Side the Border Line

Dr. J. R. Stulb, an American doctor, has had success in treating cases of infantile paralysis with injections of human blood into the muscular tissue. The cases where limbs have not become atrophied or shrunk have responded satisfactorily to the treatment.

At a joint session of the American and Canadian Medical Associations at Atlantic City recently it was made known that the vitamin E may be the means of solving important health problems successfully, problems which up to the present have caused much loss of life.

Well, Alexandrine Gibb, assistant sport editor for the Star is off to Russia. 15000 miles of travel and what sights her eyes will see. Only fair that the gentlemen writers shouldn't get all the travel. Gordon Sinclair has had a fair share already. Those necessary inoculations are not so pleasant though. There is always a fly in the ointment, it seems.

While at the combined Medical Associations convention last week in New Jersey, Dr. A. H. W. Caulfield of Toronto explained that hay fever is hereditary in a large degree if both parents are subject to the disease, and less so if only one is sensitive. Many experiments are being carried on with a view to some day being able to bring this uncomfortable disease under direct control and solve its total prevention.

European news cabled to the Canadian press is increasing continually. The Canadian papers are substantially holding their own in gaining much ground in covering the areas with their particular representatives. The wires are kept nearly as warm in transmitting messages as if war confronted us. Canadian newspapers on the whole were complimented recently in the United States for their journalistic values, news and editorial columns. Did you know that the Toronto Evening Telegram rated second highest in all of North America for its amount of classified ads? It held that record last year.

More interesting news about that interesting person, Mrs. Ethel Rogers Mulvany, who is back from India with a fine exhibit for the Canadian Exhibit. Last week she met quite by accident Campbell Wishart, Canadian radio singer of note. Mrs. Mulvany took many lovely records of Canadian artists to India and Rajah Sir Rampal Singh, an educated Indian gentleman, who has a rare taste for the finest music, was delighted with a solo of Mr. Campbell's, in fact showed so much delight over it that Mrs. Mulvany presented it to him. This was happy news for the well and favourably known singer of songs and so he is having a new record made especially for the honorable gentleman. This gift is to be carried back to India by Mrs. Mulvany when she returns in the Fall.
