Dear Hazel:
We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening to honour you and Gordon and express to you in tangible form our best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity.
You, Hazel, have lived among us all your life and many warm and lasting attachments have been made. You have been a dear friend to all of us, your cheery disposition and your willingness to help have helped to pass many a dreary hour and make it brighter. We welcome you and Gordon to our midst and trust that you both will see fit to come among us frequently. As you tread the path of matrimony together may you have the courage and strength to overcome any difficulties which may lie in your pathway. Life cannot always be all sunshine, but every cloud has a silver lining. We ask you to accept these gifts and as you use them may you be reminded of the real interest we have in you and in the new home established.

Master James Brown and little Miss Jean Risk were attractively attired as bride and groom and appeared on the scene at the proper time carrying a tub, full to overflowing, with gifts, which were opened by two intimate girl friends of the bride, Misses Ina Wiley and Verna Nesbitt and the verses were read by another girl friend, Miss Verna Wiley. Mr. Wyvill made a fitting reply thanking all for their well wishes and kind remembrances. Later on dancing was enjoyed and lunch served in conclusion.

"You'll Take Two Crates?"

Hundreds of farmers now dispose of their produce by telephone. They make a practice of calling a selected list of customers as the various farm products are ready for market. They are able to obtain the best prices and dispose of their produce quickly.

Being able to reach your market is only one of the many advantages of having a telephone. Equally important is the fact that the outside world can reach you. Many buyers make most of their purchases by telephone. Without telephone service on your farm, you are cut off from these many opportunities.
