

IN DAYS OF YORE

50 YEARS AGO, November 5, 1885

Local and Other Items

The new Methodist parsonage at Heathcote was opened last month.

Miss Brimmer, W. J. McFarland's milliner is turning out very stylish mantles, bonnets and hats.

W. J. Ross of the Seldon House, Owen Sound, died suddenly on Sunday, the 25th, from heart disease.

W. McLeod is doing a fast increasing business in both readymade and ordered work in boots and shoes. The people say it is the cheapest place in town to get booted.

The new all Canadian route to Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains, via the North Shore of Lake Superior opened for passenger traffic on Monday, November 2nd. Cars will be run through to Winnipeg without change.

Farmers' Institution—At a well attended meeting at McAllister's on Tuesday of last week for the formation of a Farmers' Institute, the following officers were elected, each of which are authorized to receive subscriptions: D. McNichol, Pres.; Geo. Binnie, Vice-Pres.; Wm. Irvine, Lamlash, Secy.-Treas.; W. Young, R. Watson, Jr., J. Hastie, D. McDougall and A. McPhail, Directors. The entrance fee was placed at 25 cents.

Hallowe'en—The boys acquitted themselves very creditably, not doing anything like the damage usually done on such occasions. The parliament building in the rear of the McDougall block was upset and the boys gathered on Monday night in order to replace the building; but notwithstanding their commendable efforts, they were unable to put it in position. They ought to get one of Mabee's patent load lifters.

Fifteen years ago and now

Fifteen years appears short when past; yet what important changes take place in a comparatively new country in that length of time. Fifteen years ago there was no Markdale; true there were a few houses in the place then called Cornabuss; now it is one of the most thrifty and staunch villages in the Dominion. Fifteen years ago we had no railway; now we have through our midst, a railway which is second to none on the continent. Fifteen years ago all the produce of this district was hauled to Collingwood a distance of nearly forty miles; now we have large storehouses and an excellent market at home, from which place the products of the surrounding country are conveyed by steam power to foreign markets. Fifteen years ago, in order to reach Toronto, it was necessary to leave home about 3 o'clock in the morning, take stage from Flesherston to Collingwood, thence by rail, reaching the city at 10 at night, and another day full as long to return; now we step into a first class coach about half past six a.m., arriving in Toronto in about four hours, have six full hours to do business in the best business portion of the day, say from 11 to 5, and return the same evening at about 9 o'clock.

Fifteen years ago we were almost completely isolated from the outside world; now we have all the means of communication of the past age in which we live: Postal, Telegraphic, Railway, etc. Fifteen years ago ye editor was twenty years of age and if he lives fifteen more he will be fifty, and if not, the world will move along just the same.

self that seeks Sanctuary. You may not need bodily refuge from persecution like those elder seekers of Sanctuary, but you do need spiritual refuge even more from the insincerities of this day, the starving of nature in skyscraper life. You need beauty and truth not as vague illusions in poetry. You need them as living realities, things more vital to your growth than any meat or drink.

Remember, "Beauty is truth, truth beauty," as Keats tells you. The beauty of all art owes its first truth to the beauty in nature. The bells of our carillon, like all bells, owe their shape to a flower. You can see the primeval craftsman's first inspiration in such an example at the Sanctuary as the blossom of the Silver Bell tree. When early dancers wreathed themselves with flowers, some were cast in metals for anklets and bracelets. Their stamens and pistils were made to tinkle. Gradually the bell evolved into its present symmetry, instinct with harmony. A bell is a perfect example of the truth of beauty. One flaw, one untruth, and both music and shape lose value.

Let the true beauty of the Sanctuary restore many commonplaces to their right dignity. Stand before the frieze above the Great North Door, and consider the pelican. This fine bird is so often ridiculed he has lost his truth. Not only is the pelican one of the oldest birds in evolution, but through his own resources he has been able to establish himself in such different centers as Europe, Asia, Africa and Americas. The pelican feeding its young from the flesh of its breast is an ancient symbol of love among many nations, and is still embroidered on priests' vestments. The pelican is one of the first citizens of Florida to find his true self again in the beauty of the Tower.

Architecture is called, "Frozen Music." Now we do not want a freeze in Florida, so we happily find the true self of our Tower in its architecture and purpose together. It is substantial music, a true Singing Tower. The landscape architect of the Sanctuary, the sculptor, the architect of the Tower, these men did not try to reproduce some historic garden, a Byzantine relief, or some Grecian temple. They say these things have inherent greatness only when they express the truth of their own countries, their traditions, their climate, their own materials and epochs. Because our Sanctuary and Tower have found their first truth in the beauty of Florida itself, its creators have given you here what all lasting civilizations have given their people, a tradition to live up to.

Students, you need no longer wait until you can "go abroad" as the saying is, to study a great masterpiece. Many of other nations will come here to study yours. Those of you who will be botanists, architects, musicians, sculptors, iron workers, engineers or leaders of many professions, have your greatest school book now open before you if you will but turn its pages. Mr. Bok has deserved well of this country, heir to his constructive vision. The builders of beauty have given you a truth to last while Florida shall last. But it is yourselves alone who can make its reality abide. It is for you to seek Sanctuary.

Make it your refuge of quiet thought today in problems of school or home. Come now in youth, come in manhood and womanhood, come in your noon and sunset and the starlit call of old age to seek Sanctuary here. Remember it now in the days of your youth, so, like Phillip Staffe's bells, like Dick Whittington's chimes, like Mr. Bok's boyhood carillon's your Sanctuary and Singing Tower will give you their truth in your decisions in that you have been true to them.
