C. R. Itic and Carman Caswell Cut Wood

Dear Readers.—I spent a day last week with Carman Caswell cutting wood and we made a record of which I am quite proud and I know that Carman is too. He was in town on Thursday and was telling me that he wanted to get a man to help him cut wood for a couple of days so I offered to go home with him and help on Friday if he would see that I got to town in time to referee the girls' hockey game that night. He was quite agreeable so I went along. We were up bright and early on Friday morning and had the chores all done in time to start for the bush at seven o'clock. Carman has a good saw and a couple of good axes, so it didn't take us long to knock down and trim a half dozen good sized trees. We had a nice pile of wood cut and split at dinner time and at noon we didn't lose much time after the meal but hurried back to the bush. About four o'clock we had the timber which we had cut down all sawed, split and piled and after Carman had measured it he said that we had better knock off as nine cords was a pretty good day's work for a couple of old duffers like us. I helped with the chores when we got back to the barn and after supper, and it was a good one. Carman hitched up and drove me back to town.

I borrowed Si Merriam's skates and a white sweater from Albert Hunt and was ready for the hockey match. When I got to the rink I noticed that Milton Perkins was all dressed up as though he was going to act as referee too. He had taken possession of the bell so I slipped down to Kelly's hotel and borrowed the dinner bell. When I got back to the rink the game had started and young Perkins was out on the ice watching the players. I hustled on with the skates and was ready to take charge at the end of the first rest period, but as I skated out on the ice Haze Freeman and Border followed me out and informed me that my position was in the players box where I could assist Mr. Goheen in coaching the girls. In order not to raise any disturbance I went quietly but when the next game is played I'll be the referee in spite of the local police or rink manager. The girls all told me that they were disappointed because I had not had charge of the game. It was a great victory for our girls and I know every person in town is proud of them.
