CANADIANS AND THEIR INDUSTRIES—AND THEIR BANK

TOBACCO GROWING

TOBACCO FARM OWNER: "Henry, you and the other men are doing fine work and I hope you know I appreciate it."

TOBACCO FARM WORKER: "Thank you; I figure you know that we appreciate our steady jobs and good pay, too."

OWNER: "Oh, well, Henry, I don't deserve all the credit. I never could have started or carried on this business properly, without the assistance of my bank, the Bank of Montreal. Like hundreds of other tobacco growers, I have borrowed every year from the Bank to pay for plants, fertilizer and labour; and soon after I began the Bank loaned me money I needed for barns and other equipment. Of course, I've kept up my end by paying off the loans when I sold my crop. There's nothing like good banking credit for making a sound business, regular profits—and giving employment."

WORKER: "So it's your bank, too! I think most of my friends in this district keep their savings at the same bank. Some of us have safety deposit boxes there, too."

In the development of the tobacco industry, as in other new and old Canadian industries, the Bank of Montreal has played an important part. From the time the plants and fertilizer are purchased in the spring and on through the growing season when money is needed for labour, equipment and buildings, the Bank's loaning facilities are at the disposal of its hundreds of tobacco-growing customers.
