Restricted Area Information

One of The Standard subscribers has asked us to answer a number of questions in connection with the campaign to make Grey County a restricted area for T.B. tested cattle. Below we give the questions and our answers:

How much would owner be paid for animal valued at $40 which reacts and has to be slaughtered? This question is hardly fair, because the simple animals are not found on any farms in the county. An animal valued at $42 would be paid for by the Government with $28. Say that ten such animals were tested and reacted four of which went to the fertilizer tanks and the other six were sold for beef the owner would receive $112 for these four and $168 for the other six plus selling value of latter on market, say $40 each, giving the owner $408 for the herd which originally was valued at $420. The Government gives two-thirds of the value of all reactors and the owner still retains the animals but must dispose of them to the best advantage. The percentage of reactors where tests have been made is very low.

How often does herd require to be tested? Initial test and once a year thereafter. If reactors are discovered then again in 60 days.

When new animals are bought is testing required? Yes. Testing is done free of charge.

If stable floors are in bad shape and new ones necessary, who pays? The owner. A good floor is always necessary in every cattle owner's stable if the best is to be got out of the animals.

Who pays cost of whitewashing and cleaning? The owner in every case.

Will creameries pay more for the better fat? No difference will be made in the price.

Will pasteurization still be necessary? Yes. Pasteurization destroys germs of typhoid, septic sore throat, colitis, etc., which are carried in and transmitted through milk.

Will insurance be dropped when area is established? Not until the whole of the province has been tested, which will be less than ten years in the future.

The following questions were asked re spraying experiments conducted by the Department of Agriculture last fall:

Did spray kill weeds and willows? It killed weeds. Department is waiting until spring comes to get final proof. If it kills 75% in one spraying the expense is justified along roads.

Will it kill quack grass? Yes, but this weed is hard to kill as there is so little leaf to eat in the spray.

What is cost per acre for treatment? It is too costly to spray over large acreage.

The Task and Opportunity of Youth

(By John F. Everson)

This is youth's generation. Today, as never before, youth stands at the gateway of its opportunity to shape the life and destiny of the country and the nation. The youth of today will be the citizen of tomorrow. Valiant youth stands ready to accept the responsibility. Young men and young women ever display fine courage and unsurpassed zeal. They dare to do the things which age ponders over.

The most essential service the youth of today can render this generation is to bring about a new appreciation of values, and to avoid the pitfalls into which their elders have fallen. The reign of prosperity set up a false standard of living. As a result the whole social, financial and political structure bowed before the power of the dollar. People forget character in their eagerness for personal gain. Everywhere the reign of Mammon could be felt. No politician was safe from the unscrupulous bribery of those who desired to obtain favours from the Government. No social achievement was denied those who could pay for it. But this system contained the seeds of its own downfall; and when the crash came, thinkers, men of action, leaders in all walks of life, as well as the ordinary man were unprepared for it.

Into this changing condition, youth should be able to adjust itself without very much effort. First they will sense the true values of life and then plunge forward with the eagerness and the self-assurance of their age. It is within the power of the younger generation now to help ease the corruption of the past decade. They must clean up the political machine and sponsor people who are free from petty cheapness and graft, and prepare for the future. In study groups, clubs and similar organizations they should now begin to train themselves to place character and integrity at the head of the list of values. They must learn to judge men, not by what they have, but what they are. No matter how popular a person may be, if he is weak in character and in moral integrity he should not be permitted to obtain power. Power in the hands of a few incompetent individuals can destroy in a short time reforms which have taken generations to achieve.

The old system is going. It would be like renovating an old house with a defective foundation to attempt to reconstruct it. A new order must be built from new material. It is on the younger generations that the country and the nation must build their hope. The present generation has failed miserably to translate its economic success into social justice. Future generations must rightly appraise the power of money. The constant desire to acquire wealth without effort must be discouraged. Young men and women who must learn again the homely virtues of diligence, concentration and self-sacrifice. They should be willing to start at the bottom and work their way up. The youth who seeks a degree or state license must realize that not only are these to be earned, they must be used for the good of others once secured. The youth who seeks a degree or state license must realize that not only are these to be earned, they must be used for the good of others once secured. The youth who understands that he must work for his place, will not likely become a loafer and whine that the other fellow got all the "breaks" and that he was discriminated against because he did not have the money to buy his way.

The youth of today can save the nation from the civil strife that has rent other countries; they can inject virility into a depression-weary land and lay the foundation of a new world, but there must first be a recognition of the true values of life: Mammon must be dethroned and Christ exalted.
