WALTERS FALLS

Mrs. S. Caswell spent a few days over the Valentine week-end with Mr. and Mrs. D. Patterson at Rocklyn.

Mrs. Shaw of Orillia and daughter, Mrs. Anna Reid, of Regina spent last week with the former's sister, Mrs. Brown, at Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Olmstead's.

The ice harvest was in full swing for a few days of last week and both butchers stored a good quantity of very good clear ice although not very thick.

The February meeting of the W. I. was held last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. N. Rennie. A nice number were present including a number of visitors from Strathavon. As there was not much business it was soon dispatched and the program taken up. "When you and I were Young" and "O Canada" were sung as choruses during the meeting. Miss L. Nigh sang "Home on the Range". Nice quilts were on display and a number of quilt blocks. The roll call was answered by showing a Valentine. Mrs. C. Wright demonstrated bound button holes in a very able manner and had a number in different stages of making to illustrate the method. Mrs. Wright is offering a prize for the best bound button hole brought to the March meeting. Mrs. E. Marshall had a very interesting reading. After singing the National Anthem lunch was served by Mesdames Long, Wales, D. Rennie and the hostess assisted by some of the younger members.

Mr. Thos. Dixon had the misfortune to have several ribs broken on Saturday when he fell off a load of hay when a slamming door frightened the horses which ran out of the barn around the field upsetting the load, breaking the wagon so that when they were caught they were attached only to the front wheels.

Talking as Youth to Youth

Heled Heath in The Christian Advance, Napanee

Although I do belong to the Younger Generation, I am not one of the anxious many who declare that we are no worse than each preceding "Younger Generation" has been. Perhaps we're no worse. But it is shameful enough to have to admit that in this era of progress and enlightenment, we cannot claim to be a great deal better.

The matter on my mind at the moment is the way in which my contemporaries—both girls and men—flock in glee to beverage rooms and spirit-serving dance floors.

I hope I'm not a prude. I love to dance; I enjoy mixed company much more than a steady diet of my own sex; I approve intelligent discussion of subjects once taboo in gatherings of good taste; I even thought I could be broadminded about these beer-wines-whiskeys-and-what-nots. But I find I can't. There are a number of experiences which, summed up, make me a confirmed tea-totaller and a mourner at the graves of friendships shattered by a triangle of which one member was Bacchus.

There was, for instance, the time I joined a group of friends to go dancing. There were no illusions. I was fully aware that beer would be obtainable in quantities and that my friends would imbibe; and while I had no intention of wavering, I felt pridefully that at least I was sophisticated enough to be pleasantly tolerant of the others. The good music and accomplished dancers in our party attracted me, and I was sure that my enjoyment of rhythmic movement would balance the scale. Sad were my reflections as I fell into a troubled sleep in the small hours of the morning.

It was unbelievable, really. In daily contacts with the three men of the party, each had been in his own way an admirable character. Phil—a gentle, kindly, humorous sort; good fun on a picnic or hike; Alec, the dreamer, quiet, smiling, and I imagined, his mind always fixed in adoration upon his Alice; and Tom—thoughtful, well educated, a bit worried because he had gone just so far, then renounced his intention of becoming a priest. These three there were—and each one of them, above all else, a perfect gentleman. The girls were like myself—eager, vivacious, and anxious to get the most out of youth. They were just enough more anxious than I that they would accept the drinks as offered, rather than be stared at in amazement.

It was very early in the evening that I became merely an observer. My ginger ale grew warm and sickening; my face was stiff with an insincere half-smile permanently ready to greet the fancied humour of my companions. Somehow they had forgotten that we had come to dance; so we just sat and sat, while the waiter came and went with his tinkling burden. I looked at my friends. These I had never seen before. Phil, with blood-shot eyes, singing a silly song as he tilted his chair against the wall; Alice crying weakly because Alec was making maudlin love to our other girl friend; Tom, all reticence forgotten, telling us seriously just why he couldn't go through with it. Oh, pitiful, pitiful fools. If you could see yourselves now!

The last straw, for me, came with sandwiches at 2.30 a.m. Unfortunately the waiter got the order a bit mixed. (He had been treated too, I expect). I was sitting between Phil and Alec, and at once they began a grabbing back and forth of a tomato sandwich in place of an egg sandwich, and vice-versa. I tried to laugh, to make them stay in their respective areas; but hands kept darting across the table in front of me and words less humorous than genuinely insulting flew around me. At last Phil directed a mock blow at Alec's shoulder. His aim was faulty, however, and his loosely clenched fist landed squarely on my nose. It didn't really hurt. But it crystallized all the revolt that was in me and I knew that I didn't want ever to see these people

Recipes for Standard's Cook Book

BUTTERSCOTCH PIE

yolks of 2 eggs (keep whites for frost)
 large cup brown sugar
 3 tablespoons flour
 3 tablespoons water
 1 cup milk
 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
 Cook together until smooth, then add butter, size of an egg.
 Aileen Graham,
 R. R. 2, Markdale

CHIFFON LEMON PIE

Grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
 4 tablespoons boiling water, added to lemons
 Let stand while you beat 3 egg yolks with 1/2 cup sugar. Pour the water and lemon on this and cook in boiler like custard. Let cool. Beat whites of 3 eggs very stiff. Add half cup sugar. Fold into cooled custard. Put into cooked crust and brown in oven. This will seem thin but it thickens as it cooks.

 Thornbury

CANTALOUPE PIE

Line pie plate with rich crust
 Peel cantaloupe, remove seeds, and slice like apple
 1 small cup sugar
 2 tablespoons flour
 grated nutmeg to taste
 dot generously with butter
 Cover with upper crust and bake in a moderate oven for forty minutes.
 Mrs. Alfred Eagles,
 Markdale, Ont.

BAKER'S GINGER SNAPS

1 cup molasses
 1 cup sugar
 1 cup butter
 1 teaspoon soda
 1/2 teaspoon ginger
 Mix the ingredients, dissolving the soda in 1 1/2 cup hot water and add as much flour as can be mixed with a spoon and kneed. Pinch off a small piece and roll in the hands, flatten and place in the baking pan. When the ginger snaps are done cooking leave in pan till they cool.

 1 1/2 cups brown sugar
 1 cup walnuts, cut fine
 1 cup coconut
 3/4 cup dates, sliced
 2 tablespoons flour
 1/4 teaspoon baking powder
 2 eggs
 a little salt
 Bake again in a slow oven till nicely browned.
 Mrs. Alfred Eagles,
 Markdale, Ont.

PICKLED BEANS

32 cups beans
 6 cups vinegar
 6 cups white sugar
 1/2 cup mustard
 1 cup flour
 2 tablespoons celery seeds
 2 tablespoons tumeric
 Boil till thick, then pour over beans, salt to taste.
 Velma Wells,
 R. R. 3, Markdale

CARROT PUDDING

1 cup grated potatoes
 1 cup grated carrots
 1 cup raisins
 1 cup currants
 1 cup brown sugar
 1 cup chopped suet or shortening.
 2 cups flour
 1/2 teaspoon soda, sifted in the flour

again.
 We all try so hard to be civilized. We learn our code of morals and etiquette and find life the pleasanter for following it and having others follow it too. Surely, surely if alcohol did no greater harm than making us forget that we are ladies and gentlemen, or making us ignore the rights and feelings of others, that alone is enough to cause us to shun it as we would an uncouth companion.

National Farm Paper

AN INFLUENCE IN OVER 300,000 HOMES

When a national farm paper passes the 300,000 circulation mark, breaking an all-time Canadian record for this type of publication, it is indeed news. This tremendous distribution was attained by the Family Herald and Weekly Star during 1936 and it is computed that well over a million people now read the Family Herald regularly.

The responsibilities devolving upon the publishers of a paper read so widely are many and heavy. The publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star have ever been alive to these responsibilities, and the phenomenal growth in the distribution of this great farm paper is attributable largely to the uninterrupted maintenance of a high tone when so many other papers were sacrificing their principles to satisfy the demands of a minority who craved sensationalism.

The Family Herald and Weekly Star still believes in the observance of Sunday, in the sanctity of the home and the simple joys of family life. In fact, it is a paper voicing the convictions of every thinking Canadian farmer and his wife. Within the pages of this nearly 70 year old Farm Journal, Magazine, Newspaper, there is a generous fund of farm information and good, entertaining reading for every member of the rural family.

Offered at popular prices (the rates are only $1.00 a year, or four years for $2.00) this comprehensive weekly is within reach of all. While the name "Family Herald and Weekly Star" is a byword in the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the paper's other title, "Canada's National Farm Magazine" is more indicative of its wide scope, for the Family Herald and Weekly Star must certainly be regarded as one of rural Canada's greatest influences.

BARRHEAD W. I.

The Barrhead W. I. met at the home of Mrs. Harold Borinsky on February 18th, and opened with the Ode and prayer. The roll was answered by 14 members. After the business session the Sunshine committee gave reports. The program was put on by the grandmothers, but owing to sickness there was only a few grandmothers present. Several numbers on the song sheets were sung: Mrs. R. W. Wilson gave papers on "Grandmother's Place" and "The Modern Grandmother"; Mrs. Arrowsmith also favored with a solo; a contest put on by Miss C. Davidson was won by Mrs. J. Torry. The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close after which the hostess and lunch committee served a dainty lunch. Owing to the illness of Mrs. Mabel Kinney the next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Harold Thibaudeau on March 18th, at 2 o'clock.
