Confirmation in St. Joseph's Church, Markdale

A largely attended service was held in St. Joseph's R. C. Church, Markdale, on Thursday of last week when the sacrament of confirmation was administered to thirty-four children of the parishes of Markdale and Gleneg. Bishop Jas. F. Ryan of Hamilton diocese conducted the service.

Besides the resident priest, Rev. Thos. B. Grace, there were present, Monsignor G. L. Cassidy, Dean of Hamilton; Rev. J. J. Flavharen of St. Lawrence Church, Hamilton, who for seven years served this parish some years ago; Rev. W. Hawkins of Teeswater; Rev. Father Callaghan of Dundalk, and the Bishop's secretary, Rev. A. O'Brien.

This was the first official visit of the Bishop since his appointment as Bishop of Hamilton. Father Grace expressed the pleasure of the parish in having him present, and assured him of their loyalty and devotion. The Bishop then addressed the congregation impressing the importance of upright Christian home life, in sustaining the ideals of a Christian nation. After questioning the children on their knowledge of Christian doctrine he administered the sacrament of confirmation, concluding with the solemn benediction.

Controlled Money Cure for Depression Mr. Russell Addresses Local Rotarians

At their regular weekly luncheon on Friday, local Rotarians showed keen interest in the discussion of Money Control by Mr. Russell, brother-in-law of Frater Grace, who introduced him as lawyer, world traveler, and employee of the Dominion government. At the conclusion of his talk Mr. Russell explained his ideas further in answer to many queries by members.

That paradox, "Scarcity in the midst of plenty", which requires the government of the U.S.A. to aid sixty-million of its one hundred and thirty million population shows the necessity for a readjustment of civilization. Everything in the world seeks its equilibrium. Just as a pyramid, stood on its apex, will topple over so our civilization is tottering towards its base, a new effort to find its equilibrium.

"We hold it to be a self-evident truth that all men are born equal and have an inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness", the first sentence in one of the world's great charters, the Declaration of Independence, is the base upon which a new nation was built. It is a "self-evident truth"—the suggestion that a helpless blind man of low mentality is equal in mental capacity to a Shakespeare. This is a proof that the modern world has lost the art of thinking. Had the great classic thinker, Aristotle, sat in at the signing of the Declaration, what would he have done? He lived in a stable society, free from strains and stresses, based on the principle of slavery. He would have scored out the sentence, word by word, and substituted, "We believe that all men, etc." Or, to satisfy pedantry, he might have rewritten it, "We believe all men have an inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, because Christ said so: 'Love thy neighbour as thyself.'"

It was this precept, taught by Christ, that drove out slavery. Fear by slave owners of the eternal hell, awaiting those who failed to abide by the teachings of Christianity freed thousands of slaves.

Then came the thirteenth century, the greatest of all in the realm of human thought. It gave us the great Cathedrals and Universities of the Old World. Such great men as Aquinas, Bacon, and Dante were contemporaries in this age. At this time Aquinas, in his work on religious principles, laid down the rule that it is immoral to charge interest on unproductive loans. It remained not only immoral but illegal until the practice was legalized in 1555.

The nineteenth century forgot the schoolmen, but Keane, the great modern British economist is inclined again to their way of thinking.

The subject of loans and interest brings us to banking. It originated in the practice of depositing valuables with goldsmiths. In 1645 the Bank of Amsterdam found that only ten per cent. of deposits was ever in constant demand, so it decided to loan the other ninety per cent. on its own responsibility, at first rather fruitfully. Also, since deposits were rarely withdrawn, but merely transferred by means of receipts, or cheques, the practice developed of lending, or issuing credits for, as much as ten times the amount of deposits.

The Bank of England started when a group of men made a loan, or issued credits in the same way, to the British government. Thus began the National Debt, which can never be paid off because the figure far exceeds the actual money in existence.

This is the reason that schoolmen said interest was illegal. A group of monopolists secured control of money, and they have the power to create it or destroy it.

Inflation, as in booms, is a money pyramid on its apex; bankers call the stock market loans and there is a crash as the pyramid seeks its base.

It was this system of credit loans that allowed the Van Sweringens to build their huge railroad empire, on a base that was $200,000 in the red. The solution to this problem lies in taking control from the monopolists and placing it in the hands of the people's representatives. In a true democracy the people may make this demand and enforce their wish. A currency commission should be set up to base money, not on gold, but on the amount of production and consumption. The commission would regulate the base automatically by an index figure, determined at regular intervals in a survey of the market.

The operation of this system would thus enable those who needed the goods to purchase them, the vendor to sell, and the producer to remain in constant production. If prices of goods on the shelves are too high for the purchasing power of the community, the retailer will supply them at a lower price and pass on his loss to the producer. The producer in turn will pass the loss to the currency commission, who, by the simple expedient of creating more currency, will reimburse the producer in order that he may continue production.

This idea is, in essential, sponsored by Keane, and Irving Fisher, eminent Yale economist, from whose book the speaker quoted the foreword, written by an outstanding American banker. The foreword explained the pernicious system by which the monopolist robs the common citizen of his purchasing power, by credit restriction, and thus of the right to work. Social credit is founded on a similar basis to the one proposed.

Former Markdale Family Achieve Renown

The following information is from the Pasadena, Calif., Star-News of recent date and refers to the sons of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thea. Hall, former residents of Markdale. The item in part follows:

"Many congratulations were conveyed to the J. Herbert Hall Company, jewelers and gift merchants, today upon the formal opening of the firm's new permanent home at 420 East Colorado Street, near Los Robles Avenue.

"Hundreds of persons visited the newly-built store during the day, and many of them declared it to be the handsomest jewelry establishment they had ever seen. Beside these oral congratulations, there were about the store many displays of flowers, expressing to J. Herbert Hall, president of the pioneer jewelry house, and his associates the good wishes of local friends and associations and friends in the trade.

"The beautiful store, complete in every detail, represents the fruition of the company's careful planning for its own building begun last fall, when the firm bought the property. The site measures 43 by 125 feet. A building already was on the premises, but it was torn down to give place to an entirely new structure, embodying latest ideas in lighting, heating, air-conditioning, service to the public in the ten departments of the establishment.

"The property, building and fittings represent an investment of approximately $150,000 by the J. Herbert Hall Company. But, as Mr. Hall said when plans were first made known, the company has every confidence in the future of Pasadena and desired a permanent location, beyond the uncertainties of tenancy. Weather and other conditions caused some delay in the process of building, but customers and firm alike will feel more than compensated for the delay by the completeness and appearance of the new store."

Being the sons of a newspaper publisher the Halls are ardent believers in the effectiveness of consistent advertising and their great success is in a large degree due to their good judgment in this connection.

HON. T. B. McQUESTEN MAKES URGENT PLEA FOR HIGHWAY SAFETY

"Safe and Sane 24th" Applies to Steering Wheels as Well as Pinwheels

RULES FEW AND EASY

An urgent appeal for a "Safe and Sane" holiday week-end was issued in Toronto on Monday by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, when he announced that his department would once more conduct a summer-time advertising and publicity campaign with the object of cutting down the appalling number of deaths and injuries which put all Ontario in mourning last May 24th week-end.

"It's not very many years ago", said Mr. McQuesten, "that the only worry we had over the 24th was whether our children would come through with nothing more serious than a scorched finger. Strong public opinion and the determination to make the Queen's Birthday 'safe and sane' has practically eliminated the horrors we used to witness each year from dangerous fireworks displays. If we can make children act with safety and caution when they have a firecracker in their hands, it seems logical to assume we can do the same with grown-ups when they have a steering-wheel in their hands."

Most people, Mr. McQuesten pointed out, have little difficulty in keeping the Ten Commandments. They are few, easy to remember, and any violations are quickly recognized, at least by the violator.

"Why, then", he queried, "should it be any more difficult to observe the few, simple rules that are designed to save our own lives and the lives of others who use our streets and highways. There are fewer than ten, and at least as easy to understand. And there can never be any doubt in a driver's mind whether or not he has violated a traffic rule."

He quickly outlined the eight safe-driving "canons" which are incorporated in the advertisement currently appearing in the Ontario press: drive at a safe speed, keep to the right, never pass on a hill or curve or when the view is obstructed, don't park on the highway, signal in plenty of time before you turn, observe all road signs and signals, be sure your car is in safe driving condition, and most emphatically if you drink, don't drive.

"There is nothing vague or difficult to understand about any of these rules", Mr. McQuesten insisted. "Anyone who has been given a license to drive is capable of following these principles. The only thing that is needed to make our highways safe is a determination on the part of every driver that he will carry out every rule of safety all the time. It sounds simple—and it's just as simple as it sounds. If we can teach our children to handle Roman candles and pinwheels safely, we should be able to teach ourselves to handle steering-wheels safely."

KEEP STEP WITH JESUS

"Thou wilt show me the path of life; in Thy presence is fulness of joy; at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore." (Psalm 16:11)

How sweet to walk the path of life after we have the new life within! So different from the walk we had when we walked after the things of the world, when we were sinners walking in bypaths of sin, thinking we were having a good time. You cannot take the world along on this path. As a young Christian finds delight in following the Lord, the enemy comes in and tries to discourage and says you need not walk so straight—you do not need to be as other Christians are. But when the enemy comes in like a flood the Spirit of God will lift up a standard against him. When you are humble you do not need to stumble. The path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. There is one standing ready to show us how to walk to have the Lord smile upon us, for He left us a good example when He (Jesus) walked the path of earth, and to walk a walk of faith as Enoch of old. He walked so far with God that he never came back any more. The walk was so delightful that he kept on until the world saw him no more.

After the resurrection of Jesus there were two of them that went to the village called Emmaus and they talked together of all the things which had happened. While they communed together Jesus Himself drew near, and He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerned with Himself. What a splendid walk they had, and they said one to another: "Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?" When we choose Christ as our Companion and Guide and walk with Him we also have some heartburns by the way, for He will smooth the rugged way and make the crooked path straight, for "in Thy presence is fulness of joy." As one said: "Pray up, talk up, walk up, dress up, clean up, pay up, and get ready to go up." If we keep step with Jesus and do not lag behind or run ahead, but just keep step with Him, He will lead us into green pastures and beside still waters. For God is not ahead of time nor behind, but just on time. At His right hand there are pleasures forevermore.—Gospel Herald.
