The Art of Coffee-Making

Prevalent as is the use of col fee in this country, it is surprising how seldom one is served a really delicious cup of coffee either in homes or restaurants. If you get poor coffee in a restaurant you feel that your money has been wasted and though one never criticizes hospitality, it is disappointing to find a hostess who erves pale, wishy-washy tasteless liquid and calls it coffee.

The question of coffee-making is often if not oftener than any other drink. And it's just as easy fee. Behind properly made coffee, whether it's boiled, drip or percolated, there are certain fundamental rules. You must have a good blend of coffee; it must be fresh, the grind must be right and ther and properly brewed. Coffee made any old way may pass but to get a fragrant, steam-

g cup of rich and satisfying cof fee, it must be made acc a recipe. For those who feel there is room for improvement in the coffee they serve, we are giving he rules for making boiled, drip and percolated coffee. BOILED COFFEE Use 1 heaping tablespoon ground coffee and 14 tablespoon eaten egg for each cup (1/2 pint) cold water. Combine coffee and egg in pot and mix thoroughly. Pour in water and bring slowly to boil, stirring coffee down occasionally. Remove from fire immediately and let stand in warn cold water into pot to sett's Strain from grounds through a fine wire strainer, muslin, or cheesecloth. (Boiled coffee may also be prepared without egg but it is less clear.) To get the best boiled coffee, it shouldn't be boiled. By keeping it under boil-ing point all the good flavors and none of the unpleasant ones ar orought out.

DRIP COFFEE

Drip coffee is practically foo proof but a few pointers should be noted in preparing it. Use an all-purpose or drip grind. Use 1 heaping tablespoon coffee for each cup of boiling water. Preheat drip coffee pot. Put coffee in upper compartment of pot. Pour fresh briskly boiling water over place until all water has dripped through once. Remove upper com partment and cover pot. Keep ho until served by placing in pan of boiling water or on an asbestos PERCOLATED COFFEE Percolated coffee is probably e most generally made because it's so easy, but the right method s apt to be neglected. The startthe coffee pot spotless and shinground coffee for each cup (1 pint) of cold water. Pour cold water into pot. Set percolator bas ket in pot and put coffee in it. Cover. Let percolate slowly and gently 10 to 15 minutes.

Whenever we have tasted a cup f perfect coffee, no matter wha method of making it was, we of a good blend; freshness; propr preparation and an imp clean coffee pot. That's why three methods is best-they're all best when properly made.
