Wm. McDonald, Editor of Chesley Enterprise, Passes

William McDonald, veteran editor of The Chesley Enterprise, educator, legislator and distinguished citizen, passed away at 6.30 o'clock on Wednesday morning at his home in Chesley in his 77th year. Shortly before midnight he complained of pains in his head and soon afterwards suffered a stroke, and this was the cause of his death a few hours later. While he has been an invalid in his home for the past five years and it was known that his condition of late had not been good, nevertheless the news that he had passed on came as a distinct shock, to his friends and relatives and the community generally. Perhaps no person in the history of Chesley was held in such high esteem as was Mr. McDonald. He was intensely interested in the welfare of the town and its people and he had a large part in the development and progress of the place during his many years of residence there. His ideals were high, his thoughts lofty and his public and private life was an open book to the people of Chesley. His influence was wide and always for the good of the community and his passing will be deeply deplored, not only among the people of Chesley, but wherever he was known. His genial personality, his knowledge of men and affairs, keen insight with regard to public matters, his love of the outdoors, interest in education, in church affairs, and in the political arena, are all so well known that it is hardly necessary to enumerate them. He was an outstanding, representative citizen who will be greatly missed by everyone.

The late Mr. McDonald was first stricken on February 10, 1934, and it was feared at that time that he was not long for this world, but his health improved from time to time, and while he was confined to his bed the greater part of the time since then, was occasionally well enough to go out for a motor car ride and to enjoy the open air in a wheelchair. Only last summer he was taken by car to Mount Forest, where he met a number of his fellow newspaper men, and was signally honored by them. All during his long illness he maintained that splendid optimism and confidence in the future which were characteristics of his life, and his cheerful spirit was always prominent when he received visitors at his bedside. As the editor of The Chesley Enterprise he wielded a strong and facile pen, while his vast fund of information concerning the town of Chesley and surrounding country was reflected in his columns. His editorials were widely read and his opinions on political and social matters were held in high regard. During his illness he continued to write his editorials, sending in his "copy" right up to the last. He was well informed of what was going on in the world, being a constant reader of the news of the day.

Mr. McDonald was born August 26, 1862, in Elderslie township, son of John and Mrs. McDonald, who settled on the 7th concession of Elderslie, four miles from Chesley.

He is survived by two sons, William, Jr., Science Master in Oakville High School, and a former teacher here, and John C., who has been associated with his father in the publication of The Enterprise—two daughters, Evelyn, Mrs. J. Harris Neelon, at home, and Marjorie, Mrs. D. R. Finlayson, of Ripley. His wife predeceased him in March, 1938.

Sims - Haw

An interesting wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage, Dundalk, at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, February 25th, when Jean Victoria, second daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Haw and the late Herbert Haw, and Percival Edward Sims, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sims, Proton Station, were united in holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. D. B. Gordon.

The bride was prettily attired in a dress of turquoise blue velvet with rose bud trimmings. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Hilda Sims, wearing a dress of rust crepe. The groom was supported by the bride's brother, Mr. Jack Haw.

After the wedding ceremony a dinner was held at the bride's mother's, where the immediate guests were assembled.

The following Wednesday a reception was held in their honor, when a large crowd of friends and relatives gathered. Numerous gifts showed the esteem in which the young couple are held.—Dundalk Herald.

Presentation at Proton

A very pleasant evening was spent in the Orange Hall, Proton Station, on Wednesday evening, March 8th, in honor of the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sims.

During the evening the young couple were presented with a kitchen table and chairs. The following address was read by Miss Arelene Whyte:

To Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sims.

Dear Percy and Jean: We, your friends have gathered here this evening to extend to you our very best wishes and congratulations on your recent marriage.

No gift we could offer would be an adequate expression of our feelings, but as a slight token of remembrance and good-will we ask you to accept this table and chairs and trust they will find a place in your home.

May the richest blessings be ever upon you, your home and your many duties through life.

Signed on behalf of the community, Earl Blackburn Roy Hergett.

The remainder of the evening was spent in music and dancing.—Dundalk Herald.

Miss Macphail, M.P., Writes from Ottawa

The debates in the House of Commons this week dealt with vital, human problems. That is as it should be. Too often Parliament seems so remote from the struggles of the people as to be unreal. But this week we sought alleviation for the people's cares, and made at least some progress.

One of the great difficulties today is the cost of illness. So many Canadians cannot afford adequate medical care. (Sixty per cent of the population receive less than a thousand dollars per year). A general debate on the problem of health was made possible by a resolution offered by the Rev. Daniel McIvor, Liberal member for Fort William. His work as a minister has brought him into close touch with the people in their sufferings. He wanted periodic examination and provision for the treatment of the sick under the authority of the federal government.

Every speaker was in favour of distributing the load of sickness over a larger group, whether the province or the dominion. We must carry each other's sickness burdens as we do in relation to education or loss by fire.

The Minister, Hon. C. G. Power, said that the provinces were doing much, Alberta and British Columbia having passed a Health Insurance Act and the other provinces have health units, travelling clinics and municipal doctor schemes. He told, too, of group activities by private citizens; for instance, the co-operative movement of St. Francis Xavier. On the first day of this year they started a mutual hospital group. Every family pays $2.00 every three months and this will entitle the members of the group to five weeks of ward treatment and fifty per cent reduction in the rate for private and semi-private rooms... X-ray and operating fees.

Mr. Power told also of the Associated Medical Services of Toronto, which Dr. Hanna organized. By this plan, each person is allowed to choose his own doctor. The membership costs $2.00 for the head of a family per month, plus $1.75 for the first dependent and $1.50 for each succeeding dependent. This provides for a complete minimum service.

Mr. Power's view is that, finally, all the schemes, whether provincial or private, will be co-ordinated in some fashion under state supervision, and he would like to see a health conference called which would be attended by the provinces, all health insurance groups, welfare agencies, the medical associations and the Dominion government, that together they might evolve a plan. Not so many years ago, few were interested; now the whole House is, the Minister particularly so.

The age limit for old age pensions will be lowered; not this year, possibly next, but before long. When Mr. Heaps first asked that it should be he got little support. This year, every speaker favoured the proposal.

"Rudy" (Porky) York Stars for Oshawa Junior Bees

Howard York, who is playing hockey this year with Oshawa Junior B team, is making the headlines with his good defensive playing. The Oshawa Daily Times, in its edition on March 16th, in reporting the game between Barrie Colts and Oshawa Junior B team, in which the latter won the round by a 10 to 4 score, has the following to say of Howard: "The back checking by Peters, McMullen and especially 'Rudy' York was another feature of Oshawa's play 'up front'."

During the game Howard was knocked out and lost a tooth and the paper has this also to say: "'Rudy' York, the gallant little winger from Markdale, turned in a beautiful game but doesn't feel much better than the Barrie fans this morning. He lost a front tooth from a high stick in the corner (it was entirely accidental) and he was rocked back about four generations by a honey of a body-check in the third period and he doesn't remember playing the last part of the game. His back-checking was superb and he is the hardest worker on the team."

with the one exception of the Minister of Finance, who administers the Act and, incidentally, provides the money (75% of the Province 25%). People of 60 and 65 years of age who, for any reason, are unemployed, find it impossible to get a job and are having increasing difficulty to provide for themselves between 65 and 70 years of age. Mr. Heaps asked the House: "Does it not seem absurd that our older population should be working when young men and women in their teens and early twenties are walking about idle?"

Mr. Dunning gave some very interesting figures. Fifty per cent of all people over 70 years of age in Canada are receiving old age pensions. If we lower the age limit to 65 it would cost, with our present population, an additional $18,859,000. Mr. Dunning said there was nothing to prevent the provinces from taking care of their people between 65 and 70, if they wished, except that the province would have to pay 100% of the cost.

The Penitentiary Bill, providing for a commission of three to take charge of all penal institutions in Canada, passed the Commons and is now in process of being passed in the Senate. You will recall that last year the Senate defeated a similar Bill. Mr. Lapointe met with some difficulties when the lengthy measure was before the House, but it did not prove serious, and the Conservatives gave a good deal of support, which is important, in view of Mr. Meighen's antagonism last year.

The plan is that the new commission, which the Minister has promised will be men of high calibre, will reform the penitentiary system along the lines laid down by the Royal Commission. They made eighty-eight definite recommendations which, when carried out will give us a penal system which reforms as well as disciplines the anti-social members of society confined in prison. Almost all prisoners are released at some time and it is necessary for the protection of society that they be turned from their destructive ways.

The House was extremely gracious to me, all members joining in the applause when J. R. MacNicol, Conservative, Toronto, and Denton Massey paid tribute to my pioneering for prison reform. In acknowledging the tribute, I said: "It is a triumph for democracy that the hon. member for Davenport (Mr. MacNicol) and I should find ourselves in agreement. I can remember that many years ago, when we were both new in this House, the respect, regard, and something close to affection, which we now feel for each other, were conspicuously lacking; but through the years it may be we have changed and now we have come to a place where we are saying identical things on this great social problem. I do appreciate his kindness in referring to me. The kindness of the hon. member for Greenwood (Mr. Massey) is not so remarkable, since our friendship has been well known from the beginning." Here Mr. Massey rose and said: "I think I should rise to a question of privilege." The Hon. Mr. Power interjected: "It is a privilege." After which, I paid a deserved tribute to Mr. Lapointe.

The trade treaties, to everybody's surprise, passed without a recorded vote. The government undoubtedly intended to marshal all the friends of the treaties into an impressive array and put the enemies on the spot. Five M.P.'s went to a hockey match, possibly not together, and they were called out by special announcement over a loud speaker. When the announcer asked the members to report at the House of Commons, many people in the huge audience were so concerned that they telephoned the newspapers to ask if some trouble had suddenly broken out in Europe. That evening I intended to go to the station to say good-bye to a group of refugees leaving for Vancouver Island, but was prevented by the Whips' anxiety to have all members in. Well, we were all there, but there was no vote. When the yeas and nays were called, the volume of sound made by the yeas left the Speaker in the position where he had to say "Carried." Since it takes six members on their feet to demand a recorded vote and only one stood (the Hon. Ian Mackenzie), the Speaker was helpless.

One of the last speakers on the treaties was Mr. Stevens and, apparently, he wasn't being listened to by the Cabinet ministers who were in, or thought he wasn't, and he chided them for their inattention. Mr. Dunning said they were discussing a point he had made. Stevens persisted and said that Mr. Dunning had a bored expression. The Finance Minister shot back: "I cannot help it if the hon. member bores me, but I was listening."

There is a good deal of sympathy in Canada for refugees, even in circles which are opposed to immigration, as such. Many have the feeling that these friends of democracy in Czechoslovakia, Austria and Sudetenland should find a refuge from persecution in the democracies of the world and that we have a duty toward them. Mr. Crerar, Minister of Immigration, made a statement the other day that an unspecified number of Sudeten Germans, anti-Nazi, would be admitted to Canada, regulated and carefully examined before leaving the other side. Each family, averaging four, would have $1,500 on arrival, provided by British and French funds, and would be settled on suitable lands by the colonization department of the Canadian railways. He said that 95% of them are Catholics; this, possibly, to reassure Quebec.

Mr. Crerar's statement had to do with farmers only. I asked him what provision was being made for the admission of scientists, musicians and professors of note who did not come under the statement he had just made. He said that in some cases, where the merit was outstanding and it was felt that a contribution would be made to Canada, the government gave permission to enter by Order-in-Council.
