Celebrities Gave Names To Grey County Townships

While in other Ontario counties, the townships names were in many instances of commonplace origin, commemorating individuals who would otherwise be forgotten even by the encyclopaedias, Grey county is in another and loftier category.

The county name itself comes from one of the more illustrious Whig statesmen of a century ago, Charles, second Earl Grey, whose British parliamentary career, in the Commons and later in the House of Lords, extended from 1786 till his death in 1845. As early as 1797 Grey introduced a scheme of parliamentary reform which was voted down. After leading the opposition party for 13 years, in 1830 he succeeded Wellington as premier; and under his government in the following year Lord John Russell introduced the first of the celebrated reform bills which changed the complexion of the British Commons and revolutionized British political life.

Another British premier of a later day is commemorated in Derby township, which is named after Edward Geoffrey Smith Stanley, fourteenth Earl of Derby, who after serving in several Whig governments was colonial secretary under Peel at the time the township was created and ultimately became Tory leader. As Earl Derby he was premier for 10 months in 1852, achieved a second premiership in 1858, and subsequently was succeeded in the party leadership by Disraeli. Later the sixteenth earl, was governor general of Canada in the early 90's.

Sydenham township commemorates that earlier governor, Charles Poulett Thompson, Lord Sydenham who succeeded Lord Durham and helped pave the way for responsible government.
Sydenham died in 1841, just before the township was created.

Among Canadian statesmen, Sullivan township was named in honor of Hon. Robert Baldwin Sullivan.
Sullivan was a cousin of the more famous Robert Baldwin, but, as a result of a quarrel with William Lyon Mackenzie in 1834, he entered public life as a Conservative. Sir Francis Bondhead summoned him to the executive council; and thereafter, no matter what party was in power, Sullivan was almost continuously in office till in 1848 he was appointed to the judiciary.

The lesser ranks of politics and officialdom have several representatives in Grey township names. Normanby bears the name of Constable Henry Phipps, Marquis of Normanby, who was secretary of state for the colonies in 1829, the year before the township was named, and who previously had been Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Bentinck bears the name of Lord William Bentinck, who had recently been governor-general of India, and who it is written, "encouraged the press, snapped his fingers at its attacks on himself, and thought its freedom an immense good."

Better known to present day Canadians was the sponsor of Glenelg township, Charles Grant, "Lord Glenelg." In Lord Melbourne's government, who had much to do with Canadian affairs during the Rebellion of 1837. A Canadian writer, Miss Lizars, has aptly recorded that.

"Lord Glenelg, with the best intentions in the world, had a positive genius for doing the wrong thing."

Holland township bears a name of uncertain origin. Named in 1840, it might commemorate Lord Holland, who was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in Melbourne's government at the time the township was constituted. A rival tradition asserts the name was given for Major Samuel Holland, an engineering officer who aided Wolfe at Louisburg and Quebec, and subsequently became surveyor-general of Canada.

Three British naval heroes have given their names to townships in Grey. St. Vincent township was originally named Zero; the name being Earl St. Vincent, who, after 53 years in the British navy, won, in 1797, the celebrated battle of Cape St.
Vincent. Though Jervis had only 15 vessels to oppose 27, he completely worsted the Spanish fleet and after the battle sailed into the Tagus with four captured ships and a large number of prisoners.

Collingwood township was originally Alta or Alba. A map of 1836, indeed, shows the name as Atlas.
It was rechristened in honor of another British admiral, Lord Colling-wood. A midshipman at 11, Colling-wood became the friend of Nelson, fought under Jervis at Cape St. Vincent, and was Nelson's second in command at Trafalgar, taking over the victorious fleet on Nelson's death.

Keppel township bears the name of Captain Henry Keppel, Queen Victoria's "little Keppel," who belongs to of it distinguished and exciting, was mostly in Asiatic waters; despite which he founded out a century of life.

Keppel began his career as a sea fighter with the famous Sir James (Rajah) Brooks in Borneo, who, in the years following 1841, was much in the world's eye through his achievements in suppressing Malay piracy in the eastern seas and subsequently became the first white rajah of Sarawak. It was from Brook's little eastern kingdom, still ruled by members of his family, that the Grey township of Sarawak derived its name.

Nor do the British naval associations of Grey county end with Sarawak. Though the Osprey or fish hawk arrives in Ontario with the spring break-up, the Grey-township of Osprey, according to well-authenticated information was named, not for the bird, but for a British warship.

Egremont township was named after George O'Brien Wyndham, third Earl of Egremont, who died just three years before the township was christened. The Earl, fabulously rich for his day, made his chief seat of Princely Petworth in Sussex, famous for its collections of sculpture, paintings and literature. His name would probably never have been bestowed on an Upper Canada township had it not been for the circumstance that his brother married Lady Lambton the widowed mother of the famous Lord Durham.

The origin of three township names—Proton, Artemesia and Eu-phrasia—are obscure. Proton was one of the township names shown on the first Canada company map of the Huron tract. It is incidentally the neuter form of the Greek adjective meaning "the first." Zero and Alta, names belonging to some distant period, have since given place to others; but Proton survives, a memorial to some unknown classical scholar in official circles or on the Canada company staff. Artemesia is the Greek name for a herb akin to wormwood; but it is likewise the name of several heroines of antiquity.
Euphrasia is the Greek name for a plant commonly known as "eye-bright" in allusion to its supposed value in eye diseases.—Tara Leader.
