The ROYAL VISIT

An Additional Release Covering the Visit of Their Majesties to Newfoundland

By A. L. BARRETT, C.W.N.A. Representative

When I suggested to our managing director that the Royal Tour representative of the C.W.N.A. extend his tour from Halifax on to St. John's, Newfoundland, and so cover the Newfoundland visit of Their Majesties, I had little expectation even of making the trip myself, much less representing the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. I had even made tentative plans for the representation of my own paper. The distance is more than four hundred miles from Curling to St. John's. However, since Mr. Dornan's long tour, accompanying the Royal Party through Canada and to the United States had necessitated long absence from his office, Mr. Charters—ever considerate of others—felt it might be unfair to ask further of Mr. Dornan's time and service, and so suggested that I do the "needful" by covering the visit to Newfoundland.

In company with seven members of my family—five daughters and two sons I arrived in St. John's on the eve of the Royal Visit. The day was bright and warm and the city looked gay in its dress of bunting and other decorations. Many fine arches had been erected and were being given finishing touches. Thousands of visitors had already arrived in the city from all parts of the country and many hundreds others were arriving hourly by train, motor and ship.

Shortly after my arrival the royal flotilla conveying Their Majesties passed the harbor and proceeded to anchor in Conception Bay.

The R.M.S. Empress of Britain, being unable to pass through the Narrows to St. John's harbour because of a shoal at the entrance making it unsafe for shipping her size, it had been previously arranged that the ship would anchor in Conception Bay and the Royal landing take place at Holyrood, a fishing village at the head of the bay some thirty miles from St. John's.

Twenty-six years to the day—Saturday, June 17, 1913—Prince Albert, second son of King George V., serving on H.M.S. Cumberland as a cadet, landed at St. George's, a coastal town on the west coast of Newfoundland and fifty-five miles from Curling. There he spent some days fishing on two of its rivers and was successful in catching three salmon.

On Saturday, June 17, 1939, this same Prince Albert, now King and Emperor of the world's greatest empire, and his loving and lovable consort, Queen Elizabeth, landed upon our shores at a fishing village—Holyrood—on the east coast of Newfoundland, as our King and Queen.

The weather changed overnight and the morning of the royal landing opened out dull, cool with slight sprinklings of rain.

At an early hour I set out on the motor trip to Holyrood. Already crowds of people were astray along the route. Buildings along the highway were gay with bunting and other decorations. I was among the early arrivals of press representatives and was assigned a favorable position where I could witness the landing and following ceremonies with ease. Already thousands of people had gathered; many of them coming long distances and had been there several hours. The slopes afforded vantage points which soon became occupied by the mass of people arriving by train and motor from towns and villages, some more than a hundred miles distant. One old lady, the oldest in Newfoundland and perhaps in the British Empire—Mrs. Carroll, who will be 112 years of age if she sees next October—had come from a village 28 miles distant. While waiting for the landing hour I was told a story which I think is well worth repeating here: "In one town there were eighty-five Girl Guides. Fifteen of them were without the price of the railway fare ($1.25). Dandelions were four cents a pound. The girls set to work and picked dandelions—469 pounds—to raise sufficient funds to enable these fifteen Girl Guides to come and see Their Majesties."

At 9 a.m. the R.M.S. Empress of Britain escorted by H.M.S. Berwick, flying the flag of the Commander-in-Chief American and West Indies Station; H.M.S. Southampton, flying the flag of the Vice-Admiral commanding the Second Squadron, and H.M.S. Glasgow arrived off Holyrood and anchored. Accompanying the flotilla were H.M. Customs cutters Shulamite and Marvita, which also patrolled the route between R.

M.S. Empress of Britain and the landing pier at Holyrood.

His Excellency the Governor-Vice-Admiral Sir Humphrey T. Walwyn, K.C.S.I., C.B., D.S.O., and staff arrived by motor car from St. John's and proceeded on board R.M.S. Empress of Britain and welcomed Their Majesties.

As Their Majesties left R.M.S. Empress of Britain a royal salute was fired by the escorting ships. As the announcement was made, "The King is coming," a shout rent the air from the throngs of people assembled over the large area.

The Royal barge on the way to the landing pier passed through coasting and fishing vessels anchored in two columns.

"The King has landed!" The climax of a great historical event—the first time a reigning sovereign had set foot upon the soil of Britain's most ancient colony. The people were filled with emotion; for a time they could not shout—could not utter a word. I personally had that feeling and many told me later that they experienced the same. Soon, however, the "spell" was broken and cheers broke forth from every throat. The King wore the uniform of Admiral of the Fleet. The Queen looked more charming than ever, dressed in her most favorite blue.

A royal salute by the guards of honor was received by the King, and the National Anthem was played by the band.

Their Majesties were welcomed by His Excellency the Governor on behalf of Newfoundland. Then followed some presentations.

Her Majesty the Queen was presented with a bouquet consisting of white and red carnations, the presentation being made by a little girl named Christina Barron.

After inspecting the guards of honor, Their Majesties, amidst roars of cheering, entered the royal car and the royal procession proceeded slowly over the highway the thirty miles to the city of St. John's. Passing through the various settlements, men, women and children lining both sides of the road, waving flags and cheering, the King and Queen acknowledging with handwaves and smiles. Arches had been erected at each settlement along the route, these were beautifully decorated while bunting fluttered to the breeze from every home.

At the city limits of St. John's a pavilion had been erected. Here the royal car stopped. As Their Majesties alighted they were greeted by the mayor and councillors of the city. An address of welcome was presented by His Worship the Mayor of St. John's. The mayor and his wife after being presented to Their Majesties presented the councillors and their wives.

Amidst thunderous cheers Their Majesties proceeded to the pavilion, and His Majesty the King broadcast a message to the people of Newfoundland and Labrador.

The National Anthem by the band, then there were further outbursts of cheering.

The King and Queen again entered the royal car and proceeded through streets lined on both sides by thousands of children, each holding a Union Jack and waving and cheering, the older people standing in the rear, while Scouts and C.L.B.'s assisted the police in patrol work; the Queen waving her hand and smiling all the time, and the King likewise acknowledging the cheers and salutes from side to side as they proceeded on to Government House.

It was a colorful sight as the royal procession moved through this mass of humanity, all doing their utmost to extend a hearty welcome, and show their love and loyalty to their King and to their Queen. As the royal car reached Harrison Hill it was joined by an escort of mounted police leading the way to Government House grounds.

On arrival at Government House Their Majesties were received by a Colour Party bearing the Colours of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment and a Guard for the Colours, which His Majesty was pleased to inspect. Major J. W. March, M.C., and Sergeant T. Ricketts, V.C., were then presented to Their Majesties. Sergeant T. Ricketts is Newfoundland's one and only V.C.

The most colorful event of the day was the ceremony at the National War Memorial. Long before the time set for the arrival of Their Majesties at the Monument the streets and

Buffalo Man Killed by Lightning at Williams Lake

John Klaiber of Buffalo was instantly killed on Tuesday when he was struck by a bolt of lightning as he was coming ashore from a fishing boat during a heavy electric storm at Williams Lake, about two miles above Holland Centre.

In company with Thomas McGrath, also of Buffalo, he was coming in to seek shelter from the storm. McGrath got out of the boat first and was about twenty feet ahead of him and was not injured. Klaiber, who had a steel pole, had just stepped from the boat when he was struck.

Klaiber was wearing a slicker hat, such as is worn by fishermen, and this was split in two in the centre and the electric current passed down his body until it struck his watch chain, which was melted, but his watch was not damaged and was still running when he was picked up.

The two men came from Buffalo on Monday for a few days' fishing and they had been unusually successful as the boat contained a number of good sized trout.

It was decided that an inquest was unnecessary and the body was taken to Buffalo for interment.

Black - McAsey

On Wednesday morning, June 28th, a very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Church, Glenelg, when Anna Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. Jeremiah McAsey and the late Mrs. McAsey, was united in marriage to Archie Joseph Black, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Angus Black. Rev. Father T. B. Grace performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Tom, wore a gown of mauve crepe with white accessories and carried a bouquet of Briarcliffe roses, snapdragon and maiden hair fern.

Miss Margaret McAsey, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid wearing Queen's blue crepe with white accessories and carried Briarcliffe roses and maiden hair fern. Mr. Francis Black, brother of the groom, was bestman. Immediately after the ceremony they motored to the bride's home for breakfast and later left for a short honeymoon by motor to Brantford, Detroit and Buffalo. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Glenelg.

The bride and groom were accompanied to the church by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Joseph Black, and the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Black. The bride's bridesmaids were Miss Margaret McAsey and Miss Mary Black. The groom's bestman was Mr. Francis Black. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father T. B. Grace.

Musical Recital by Pupils of Mrs. W. E. Harris

A very pleasing musical recital was given by the pupils of Mrs. W. E. Harris at her home on Wednesday evening, when the parents of the children and a few friends were present to enjoy the entertainment. Red and white ponies with wild roses centering the dining table were flanked with tall cream colored candles.

Mrs. G. A. Beaton and Mrs. L. Rapp had charge of the dainty lunch which was served by Miss Elda Kinney, assisted by some of the older pupils. Mrs. P. J. Thompson poured the tea.

Each pupil had two selections, and the rendition of their various pieces was creditable. There was also a duet by Donald Kidd and Bobby Rapp. Others taking part were Fern Harris, Eleanor Henry, Lois and Audrey Kidd, Pat Thompson, Eleanor Morrison and Shirley Rapp. At the close of the recital Mrs. Harris received a pleasant surprise when her pupils presented her with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

Bill Hill Told Rotarians of "Clover Seeds"

At the meeting of the Rotary Club on Tuesday evening Bill Hill was the speaker and gave an interesting talk on the production and sale of clover and grass seeds. He explained the set which regulates the grading and sale of the various seeds and which eliminates from the domestic market a great quantity of the seed produced in Canada. We have in Canada the most stringent laws against weeds of any country in the world.

During the past twenty-two years the speaker has been in charge of the seed business of F. T. Hill & Co. and during that time has gained considerable knowledge of the business. He told of the risks which dealers must take in buying because when there is a surplus of seed that which is held over becomes infertile and thus the value is lost. The price of seed is always regulated by the demand and by the freedom from weed seeds. Often samples are submitted which could not possibly be cleaned to supply the domestic market and this must be purchased at a price which will produce a profit after being cleaned and exported. Expensive machinery is used for cleaning purposes and adds much to the cost of pure seed.

Last year Canada produced 6,500,000 pounds of alsike and used 600,000 pounds. The price of course was low because of over production. Eight per cent of Canada's Alsike is grown in Ontario and the Hill's cover 75% of the Ontario territory. This year's crop promises about 20% of last year's and the price will, therefore, be better than a year ago.

Three and a half million pounds of red clover were produced in Canada last year and more than half of this was used in Canada and about 1,000,000 pounds were exported. The district adjacent to Markdale is not adapted to this variety.

Mammoth clover, the best for our locality, was produced to the extent of 500,000 lbs. and 750,000 pounds were used in Canada last year. Alfalfa is a good hay crop but care should be exercised in selecting the variety to sow in this district. Sweet clover makes good fodder when properly handled and cured. It is not a money maker when grown for seed although some years ago the price was good.

Bill also explained the growing of blue grass and other varieties which are used chiefly on lawns, etc. He demonstrated to his fellow Rotarians that he knows the seed game which at best is but a gamble for the dealer who handles large quantities. A great many car loads of seeds are exported by the local firm during a year.

At the close Frank Sawyer expressed the thanks of the members to Mr. Hill for his informative talk.

Tom Berry, the new president, presided and was given a hearty welcome by all present.

Mr. Herb Lamb of Detroit was a guest at the meeting and entertained with a vocal solo.
