height for fall and not for spring. One such hat is almost small enough to be called a toque in ing the lowest. One of the prettiest is a fairly wide brimmed shape with a little sweep to it, up at one side and down at the oth er, and a small crown nearly inches high. It is done in baku in a soft Nattier blue, which makes a lovely contrast with three sprays of rosy pink wall flowers against one side of the crown.

There are pretty flower trin mings at Suzy also, among the smartest being small bunches of violets, one a little larger than the other, at opposite sides of the brim of a small canotier of black felt, each side rolled a little. Fruit is also being used by this milliner; tiny, smart and picturesque is a small shape in honey color felt or straw covered by velvet crab apples tinted by hand in rosy tones over the golden base.
