Nothing doing since New Year, but choring and snow tunnelling. At last we've emerged.

A group of country chaps, who hadn't been able to get to town recently, met in a corner of a store and were discussing politics and public men generally, when in plodded an old farmer with a very solemn face, with an inquiring look stamped on it. "Well, Diogenes!" said a jocular youth, "what are you looking for?" "I'm in search of an honest lawyer," he replied somewhat wearily. "Gosh!" exclaimed a wag, "you'll need an extra supply of oil in your lantern, as they are not turning out many of that kind any longer". The group went on discussing public men and the most popular fellows, both far afield and at home, when one silent fellow, heretofore, spoke up. "The most useful, progressive and popular man in Grey County is T. Stewart Cooper" he said emphatically. "He is always helping some one to find seed grain, to secure thoroughbred stock, to have the soil analyzed, to suggest how to beautify and enhance a farmer's surroundings and to better his financial conditions and countless other things. I don't know of anyone that is doing so much to better the lives of both town and country folk than he". A chorus of voices chimed in—"Gor! that's true!" "Now, you're hitting the nail, old man!" while many heads nodded approval.
