What Science Is Doing

THE ROLE OF SCIENCE "The role of science in the alture of this continent is three fold," last week declared Dr. Arthur H. Compton, Chicago's cosmic ray man, one of the world's best known scientists. "First, it supplies more adequate means of living, giving men longer life, beter health and a richer variety of experience. Second, it stimulate man's social growth by rewarding more abundantly co-operative ef-fort and punishing more severely his antagonisms. Third, science serves as a direct means of ex-

The experimenters were anxious to find out what gives a sleeper the sensation of falling. It was discorered that slight depressions of the bed produced the sensation. Lowering the bottom end slightly brought about a sensation of slid-ing down a chute feet first; slight pressure on the left side of the pillow produced a dream of falling into a cellar and whirling to the

British Losses Said Negligible Modern

Comparatively Few Merchant Ships or Naval Vessels Sunk Since Beginning of Present War — German Claims Exag-BY ROBERTA LEE gerated

Germany's continued claims of inkings of Royal Naval vessels last month in London brought a formal statement which summarzed Britain's and Germany's naval losses since war began. It show-ed that the Nazis had lost 21 his, exclusive of a large number of submarines. British lesses, including sub-marines, number 18. (Submarines lost were listed at five). CRUISERS INTACT The statement clearly showed that whereas Germany's losses re-presented a staggering blow to her naval strength, Britain's her naval strength, Britain's strength at sea remained unimpaired.

Of the 15 capital ships Britain possessed at the start of the war, only the Royal Oak has been lost. The Courageous is the only one of seven aircraft carriers lost. Bri-tain has not lest a single cruiser. Her other losses are 10 destroyers of the pre-war fleet of 185 and

NAZI BATTLESHIPS GONE German casualties include both her battleships, two of her three pocket battlothips, both of her heavy cruisers, all six-inch gun cruisers with which she started the war, and 12 surface torpedo eraft., SINCE NORWAY

Unofficial estimates of U-Boat sinkings by the Allies have ranged as high as 60. Naval sources point out the statement is not the whole story. Since Hitler invaded Norway, 26 transports and supply ships have been sunk or scuttled. Ten others were hit by torpedoes and probably sunk. One was set on fire during an air attack and four German vessels were captured.

Interesting Experiments Are Carried Out, With Dreams Made To Order - Average Lasts 30 Seconds

The subject of sleep - and of dreams — has long fascinated the scientists, and some experiments ecently carried out throw a new and interesting light on the latter. In these experiments dreams were made to order. One student had the back of his hand pinched by a pair of calipers; he dreamed that a rat came out of a hole and bit him. Another had a vibrating tuning-fork brought close to his ear: the result was a dream. of an aerial battle. SENSATION OF FALLING

Hearing rumors that the Allies were having a tough tim of it in Norway, many Canadian sought to pierce the veil of censor-ship by buying U. S. papers, or rnshing to their radios every time an American commentator came on the air. They wanted to know what was behind the obvious dissatis faction in British parliamentary circles with the conduct of the Norwegian campaign. Was Germany winning? To look at the map was helpful, but not enough to clar ify an obscure situation.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal

M.P. in the British House, was outspoken: "The Government mus take vigorous measures and deter lined action in Norway, or remaining neutrals will climb on the Ger man bandwagon." Further, "If the wegian campaign it will be for Par ament to act objectively, fearles ly and resolutely as the grand in quest of the nation."

FOURTH WEEK BEGINS
At the end of the third week the war in Norway, the German High Command claimed that Oslo and Trondheim had been linked by Nazi columns, that Dombas, strategic rail junction, had been captured, giving the Nazis control of the main railway line from the Nor-wegian capital to Trondheim. The Allies, while admitting withdrawal in several sectors, still commanded the approaches to northern Nor-way; held the important ports of Namsos and Andalsnes; and were successfully landing substantial reinforcements of men and supanti-aircraft guns.
