Why Britain Will Win

By Arthur Wauters, famous Belgian Statesman and Writer

Hitler's military victories achiev ed, for a time, a double psychologic cal result. The German people were filled with faith in a magician who was re-shaping Europe, as though invested with a mysterious power On the other hand, some superficia neutral onlookers began to be convinced of the invincibility of Nazi Germany.

The Allies, perhaps unwittingly scriptions of the war methods of the German armies in the first period of the war. They did it, of course, with the praiseworthy object of stimulating the will of resistence and readiness of sacrifice of the democratic masses.

The psychological effect of the German successes has been increasing in geometrical progression. Hitler has kept his promises of victory with mathematical precision. He had announced that he would be in Paris on June 15. He was there.
