Each has been largely responsible for the growth of the other, sharing the same fat and lean years, co-operating for the mutual benefit of each other. Canada had to have a transcontinental railway and gave a private company approximately $77,000,000 to build one. In return the Canadian Pacific Railway provided the line, helped spopulate the prairies, provided sixty years of the highest standard of service and in the same period paid approximately $172,000,000 to the tax authorities with the company was as general delivery was one that remained with him and governed his business dealings throughout his life. In his term as president, from 1899 to 1918, the prairies were settled and developed, a steambridge of the British Empire.

people of Canada and in the growth of the company in this period.

Lord Mount Stephen, the organizer; Sir William Van Horne, the builder; Lord Shaughnessy, the developer, and Sir Edward Beatty, the modernizer, succeeded in that order to the presidential chair. Strong men, possessing great love for Canada and great hopes for Canada and great hopes for Canada and great hopes for the future, they differed vastly in character and abilities but each seemed born for the particular term of office he occupied, able to meet the peculiar problems of his time, with the ability and strength of will to discharge his duties faithfully to company and nation.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company was born on February 15, 1881, when the Government of Sir John A. Macdonald authorized the building of the transcontinental line, and was officially organized two days later. Since that day the company and nation beth developed from infancy to pros-
