THE PRESS AND THE GOVERNMENT

Misconceptions relating to the right of the press to criticize, commend or suggest to government bodies, civic, provincial or federal, is often assailed. For that reason it is essential that the position of the press in its relationship to governmental bodies should be examined.

Many well-meaning people conscientiously believe that the press should express no conviction upon civic, provincial or federal affairs. They assume that to offer criticism is to become partisan. They confuse the meaning of the words "independent" and "neutral". There is a very real and vital difference between the two. To be independent is to reserve the inalienable right of every citizen to approve or disapprove of any public matter without thought of servitude to any particular party or group. To be neutral is to avoid reference to any contentious matter. To sum up the two it would be fair to say that independence was that same privilege of the individual to decide for himself, for which party he shall vote, or which church he shall attend without pressure from party executives or religious dignitarles. To be neutral is to admit that one is not prepared to come to a decision or make a stand on any matter, and therefore to leave it alone.

Members of civir bodies sometimes point out that newspapers have such a tremendous influence in the community, and that their circulation is so the privilege granted by almost every newspaper with whom they disagree. This is true only in-sofar as the individual refuses to take advantage of the privileged granted by almost every newspaper of using the columns of the press, to express his or her views. There is however, a' much more important angle to this question. Newspapermen are equipped to give more adequate study to municipal affairs than most individuals. At their finger-.... they have information which is not so readily y citizen. Their representatives of municipal affairs than the average voter. Of even greater importance is the almost universal attitude of the public to expect advice and leadership from the press. The newspaper is often the only medium through which citizens may keep in touch and abreast of the affairs of the community. They expect, and have the right to expect, that their newspaper will keep them advised of what is going on, and will also, through the information at its disposal, endeavour to interpret the news. The newspaper which fails to do this, is failing in what often amounts to Its supreme task in the community. public office is that any criticism offered in a news-

hodies, and therefore have

the opportunity of getting a better understanding

Another assumption of some men and women in paper is personal, rather than objective. That is not true. Newspapers have been known to conduct violently personal campaigns, but it is the excention rather than the rule, and if any criticism violates the laws of defamatory libel, the individual always has recourse to the courts. The newspaper which comments on public affairs, far from being presumptuous, is but fulfilling one of the most important and vital functions of the press. If it is genuine in its desire to be of service to the community, it will open its columns. to signed letters from those who disagree with its editorial opinions, but all too often those who have this privilege fail to avail themselves of the opportunity, preferring to carry on a street corner or platform feud against the newspaper. By intelligent comment on public affairs the newspaper prevents the rise of unscrupulous men who seek office for private gain, and it often brings to light factors in a situation that have been entirely overlooked by the civic administrators and the public. In this service alone newspapers have saved their communities from colossal financial loss and from racketeers who would use public office to enrich
