Harkaway W. A.

The Harkaway Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. J. and W. Halbert on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 17, with an attendance of eight, along with a number of visitors. The Theme song was sung, followed by all repeating the Lord's prayer. Mrs. Cecil Carbert had charge of this meeting.

Mrs. Rae gave a reading, entitled, "Happiness at Work". The secretary read a letter of thanks from Mr. and Mrs. A. Goudy. Mrs. Jack Acheson is to do the cleaning in the church for the winter months. On motion of Mrs. Rae and Mrs. Will Halbert it was decided to have a birthday box and each member to put a copper in for every year old they are at the time of their birthday. The secretary was asked to write a member, Mrs. Wes. Patton, who moved away, a letter of appreciation for her loyal support during her term as a member of the W.A. The next meeting will be held in the church basement. Mrs. W. J. Lyons will have charge of this meeting. There will be no lunch at this meeting. Meeting closed with a hymn and all repeating the benediction. Tea money $1.73.

'Home Town' Day as the Weekly Papers Arrive

"Home Town" day at army training camps across Canada is Friday—when the bulk of weekly papers are passed out at noon mail parades to eager-eyed lads in uniform. A quick glance over the front page and then at the local column is merely a foretaste of pleasure to be had that evening. Then it will remain the unswerving object of interest for an hour or two on bunk, in barracks or in a comfortable spot in some Auxiliary Service hut.

It is then that the weary editor, short of sleep because of his struggle to keep community happenings as fully recorded as of old, in spite of labor shortages, should have some magic means of looking over the shoulder of just one of his Army readers. His fatigue would melt and vanish in the happy revelation of the full warmth of appreciation shown toward his endeavor which service men agree is a top-ranker among vital morale building agents.

It also would be nice to have there Mrs. Jones who dropped her washing long enough Monday to telephone the village newspaper that her youngest boy, Johnny, had just attained the rank of corporal in his new field of duty abroad. She would see how mention of his name and military advancement still further inspired the will-to-be-there of widely separated comrades in arms.

Favorite week-end congregating spots in cities are reading corners of Y.M.C.A., Legion, Knights of Columbus, or Salvation Army establishments where weekly papers from everyone's home town are found. In them every word dispels shadows of loneliness and forms an intimate and friendly link stretching back from the new phase of duty to things so close to the heart. And prominence in thought of these things so frequently do much to keep fellows on wholesome paths during idle moments in strange environments.

Regular appearance of home-town sheets comes as the greatest boon to the fellows whose folks and friends have been a bit on the careless side in writing.

Or, perhaps, the last letter from home neglected to mention that Aunt Jenny was able to pull through the pneumonia attack again this winter. But someone had been kind enough to remind the editor, and he didn't forget. "She isn't a real aunt of mine, you see, but rather one of those souls who make themselves an aunt to everyone," this reader explained to a newly-found pal in the adjoining bunk. "You should see the swell socks she knits for lads from home. It's surely nice to know she's back on her feet again." "It kind of makes you realize all the things we have to fight for when you think about what these ladies are doing," the other added by way of agreement. "Our paper just mentioned today about a woman next door drumming up a new group to send razor blades to army chaps. She's doing so much Red Cross and Sunday School work now, you'd wonder how she would find time for anything else."

"Take a look at this while I stoke up the stove," invited a third lad on the upper bunk as he extended that week's copy of what he considered Ontario's brightest journal. "We've got a 'hum-dinger' of a minister in our church at home who really stirs up a guy's ambition," he explained. "Each week our paper prints something like this about his sermon the Sunday before. It's almost like being at church back home for a few minutes reading it."

NEWS FROM HOME—Better than a best-seller in any barracks is the weekly newspaper from home, crammed with the story of friends and neighbors. The account of a mutual acquaintance who has just joined up catches the eye of Sapper Tom Miller (left) and Corporal Dick Donald, both of Oshawa, in the top picture. Below, three of a kind, all gunners and all from Timmins, Ontario, get in a huddle over the latest copy of their favorite reading. From left to right they're Russell Capeless, Bill Dalley and William Bain. (CANADIAN ARMY PHOTO)

"This is my nine-year-old lad here," still another announced proudly, pointing to a name at the top of a school report list. "Last week he had his name on the front page for being first in a Saturday morning salvage drive," he boasted. "And here in this Scout column is the name of a next-door youngster whose dad just reached England last month. I'll stick this clipping in a letter I'm sending him today. Here are some letters printed from other soldiers all over that I'm going to stick in the same envelope. Just before he left we were saying we'd never seem too far from the home folks as long as we could see our paper or things clipped from it."

Weekly references to recreational, entertainment and athletic events in district military camps achieve surprisingly broad interest. Very often those from far-removed centres now have pals of former days in training at the town whose newspaper they just have been shown for the first time. Thus, capable training camp contributors to columns in neighborhood weeklies may have their items scanned at incredible distances by eyes seeking a familiar name.

Lively discussion groups, which thrive on the luxury of the scores of new friends which army life brings together, find fuel for new thought in weekly columns.

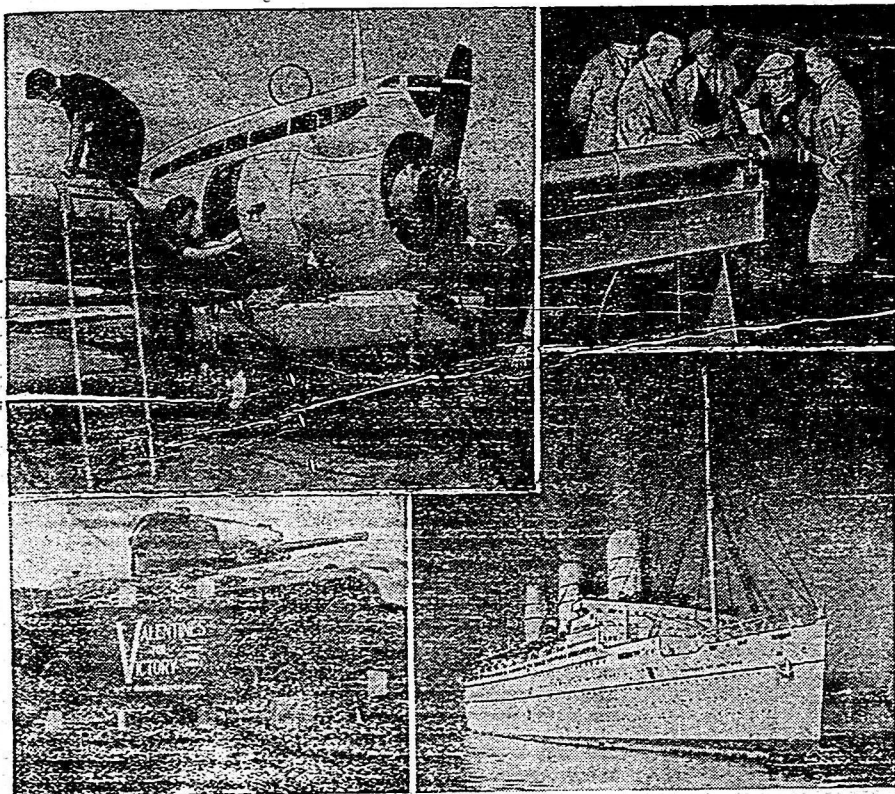

Reference in an editorial to the noble work being done by a club of northern ten-year-old lads helping with chores of mothers whose own sons are in active service quickly became a topic of general conversation. It precipitated a two-hour talk around a hut stove in which ideas were exchanged about what could be done to develop more wholesome citizenship.

Reports of municipal discussions and of how home utilities are maintained in the face of restricted budgets and help shortages are followed closely.

References to transportation problems and consequent introduction of ingenious ideas to conserve materials desperately needed in production of war munitions also become the themes of interesting bunk-side conferences. Difficulties in obtaining fuel, one of the unpleasant sides of home life which many personal letters omit, make many a soldier a bit more careful in easing the consumption of coal in banking up the hut stove for the night.

So the weekly editor, who never forgets, is one of the most faithful correspondents from back home—the ever-active liaison between soldiers of freedom in the field and on the home front.

The Canadian Pacific at War

Keeping pace with the Dominion's expanding war effort, the Canadian Pacific Railway has established an enviable record in the production of tanks and naval guns, the transportation of troops and war material, the training of Air Force personnel, and in countless other ways.

The pace of tank production at Angus shops, Montreal, has been increasing steadily since the first Angus-built tank rumbled off the assembly line in May, 1941. Hundreds have been turned out since. Naval gun production figures at the company's Calgary shops make an equally impressive showing.

Today more than 14,000 of the Company's personnel are on Active Service; 1,500 more are in Reserve units or on loan to the Government.

Hundreds are attached to C.P.C. units, Red Cross groups, participating in salvage campaigns, and other patriotic enterprises. In Montreal alone, more than 2,800 employees have pledged themselves as blood donors.

The movement of troops, transportation of wartime freight, and the handling of traffic that dwarfs all peacetime records, have been carried out with remarkable efficiency, despite limitations of manpower and equipment. Several C.P.R. diners have been converted into commissary cars.

The performance of Canadian Pacific liners has also written a proud chapter in the company's records. These great vessels, under Admiralty Charter, are keeping men and supplies on the move all over the world. Eight C.P. ships have perished in line of duty. Canadian Pacific Air Lines have also "gone active." In co-operation with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the company's air arm now operates six air observers schools, one elementary flying training school, all on a non-profit basis, and five overhaul and repair plants.

Canadian Pacific contributions to Canada's first three Victory Loan campaigns totalled $43,812,500, while monthly employee payroll deductions for War Savings Certificates average $113,000 a month.

The full scope of the Company's war effort is impressively illustrated in the booklet "Canadian Pacific at War"—a few scenes from which are shown above, and which can be had upon request.
